FALL FROM A CAR IS FATAL

FATAL ACCIDENT NEAR GARRETT

Mishap Occurs as Car is Rounding Curve at the Gravel Pit.

[Special to The Sentinel.]

Garrett, Ind., July 6.—Frank Landgraff, conductor of a freight car on the Toledo and Chicago interurban line, was instantly killed at 11 o'clock today when he fell from the rear of his car as it was rounding the curve at the garvel pit, two miles south of this city, at a high rate of speed. Landgraff was about 25 years of ago and unmarried. His home was at Albion, but since he had been in the employ of the interurban company he had been living in Fort Wayne, rooming on Second street in that city.

The car was north-bound, having left Fort Wayne at 10 o'clock this morning in charge of Conductor Landgraff and Motorman William Schuster, of Garrett. At it neared the gravel pit curve, five miles north of Huntertown, traveling at a speed of perhaps forty-five miles an hour, Landgraff stepped to the rear of his car to watch the trolley pole and guard against it leaving the wire.

In some manner the conductor lost his footing and fell or was thrown by the momentum of the car. He fell directly upon the track behind the car with such terrific force that his skull was crushed and the man's brains were oozing out as the car was stopped and Motorman Schuster ran back to his side. Landgraff's body was picked up and placed aboard the car and brought to this city, where Dr. Thomson made an examination and said that death had been instantaneous.

The remains were taken to the Moore & Satterfield undertaking rooms to be prepared for removal to Albion, where Landgraff's parents reside.

Members of the city fire department are highly pleased over the appreciation shown by the Mayflower Milling company for the work done by the department during the recent fire. The fire laddies put forth their best efforts to quell the flames and although they were only doing their duty they feel that their work was appreciated.

The firemen's pension fund benefited by the work of the fire-fighters greatly Wednesday afternoon, Chief Henry Hilbrecht, chairman of the board, receiving the following letter:

Dear Sir: With a view of partially expressing our appreciation of the excellent work done by the department in saving our elevator during the recent fire we herewith hand you our check for two hundred and fifty dollars ($250) as a contribution to the firemen's pension fund, which please accept with our best wishes.

PEDAGOGUES TAKE FRISCO.

Thousands Gathering for Annual Educational Convention.

San Francisco, Cal., July 6.—The first big influx of eastern delegates to the convention of the National Educational association, which opens here tomorrow, arrived today. This vanguard included representatives from Chicago and New Orleans. The reception committees are busy with plans for welcoming thousands of visitors.

The most notable of the day's arrivals was Mrs. Ella Flagg Young, president of the association, who is city superintendent of schools in Chicago. Mrs. Young came with a party of about thirty.

The opening feature of the convention will be a banquet tomorrow evening in Mrs. Young's honor.

STORE WRECKED BY BOMB.

New York Man and Son Taken Unharmed From Ruins.

New York, July 6.—Firemen had to dig Giovanni Madonia and his son out of the ruins of their grocery today after the place had been wrecked by a bomb.

They were not badly hurt. This is the second time in five weeks that a bomb has been exploded in front of their establishment. The former explosion filled the father's leg full of nails.

Madonia has received threatening letters from the black hand and several months ago his nephew, Giovanni Lombardia, was shot to death in the neighborhood.

ROBBERY MOTIVE OF MURDER.

Man Found Beaten to Death in Field Near Cleveland.

Cleveland, O., July 6.—The body of a man evidently beaten to death with a stone cutter's mallet, was found in a field at the west end of Jefferson avenue today. He is believed to be Boris T. Miller, 3524 Longworth avenue. Robbery is thought to have been the motive, as Miller had displayed a roll of money freely last night. Police are looking for a man seen in his company then. The latter carried a mallet.

RELIEF FROM HEAT COMING

CORN STATES ARE GETTING SHOWERS

Moderate Weather Will Be General Within a Day or Two.

Washington, July 6.—Cooler weather was promised by the government forecaster to the north Atlantic states, practically the only section of the country where the hot wave that spread from coast to coast and from the lakes to the gulf during the past week, remains wholly unbroken. By tomorrow night Boston, now one of the hottest places on the map, will get relief, it is predicted, and the worst and most prolonged spell of heat since 1901 will be broken.

New York and Washington began today with thermometers registering 74 and 80 degrees respectively, at 8 o'clock, as they did at the same hour yesterday. Chicago's official figure was 80, a drop of six degrees. Boston, with 86 degrees as compared with 82 yesterday morning, led the country for heat, along with Northfield, Vt., Syracuse, N. Y. and Concord, N. H.

It is considerably cooler in the upper lake region, the plains states and the middle west and further drops in temperature are probable in the next twenty-four to thirty-six hours. Showers have moderated the heat in the southern states and relief from the same source may be had by the Atlantic states within the next thirty-six hours.

High temperatures continue in the Ohio valley and lower lake regions, but the indications are that these sections will be relieved with the Atlantic states tomorrow.

APPALLING DEATH LIST.

Chicago, July 6.—Two hundred and one deaths and 273 prostrations was the toll extracted by Chicago's record-breaking hot wave which lasted for five days. One hundred and twenty-five infants who died from the heat are included in the list of dead.

The hot wave was broken shortly after 1 o'clock this morning by rain, which brought with it a cool breeze and a drop in the temperature of 6 de-

GIRL'S STRANGE LAPSE OF REASON

FOUND IN STAIRWAY

Anderson, Ind., July 6.—Ruth M. Munger, the 14-year-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John Munger, of this city, who was found yesterday unconscious and almost dead from hunger and exposure in Muncie after a two days' absence from her home, has been brought home by her father and shows some improvement today. Her story of her wanderings remains incoherent and on some phases her mind is still a blank.

The girl wandered eastward from her home and tiring of walking sat down on an interurban track and forced a car to stop. She had no money and the conductor, observing something was wrong, carried the girl to Muncie without fare. From Muncie she says she wandered into the country and slept one night under a hedge. After that her mind is a blank and she does not remember returning to Muncie, where she was found in a stairway of a public building.

Mr. Munger says his daughter has been subject to fits of melancholy ever since a year ago when her baby brother was burned to death while in her care.

MYSTERY IN CRIME.

Body of Unidentified Man is Found at Hudson, Ohio

Hudson, Ohio, July 6.—Mystery surrounds the murder of a man whose body was found near the Pennsylvania freight depot early today. The murdered man has not been identified. He was about 35 years old and fairly well dressed.

Robbery was evidently the motive of the killing, as his pockets were turned wrong side out and there was nothing of value left in his clothes, if he had anything before he was killed.

THE IVERNIA IS SAILING.

Liner Disabled on Daunt's Rock Goes Under Own Steam.

Queenstown, July 6.—The Cunard steamer Ivernia, temporarily patched up, sailed this morning for Liverpool under her own steam but escorted by five tugs and salvage steamers.

The Ivernia has been laid up since she struck near Daunt Rock during a fog on May 24. She was coming in here from Boston at the time. Permanent repairs will be made at Liverpool.

John Frank Treat, Imperial Deputy Potentate of the Shrine and Past Potentate of El Zagal emple, of Fargo, N. D., will probably be elevated to Imperial Potentate at this conclave. The Arab patrol of El Zagal Temple will go to Rochester and act as escort to Imperial Potentate Treat should be elevated to that high position.

NEIGHBORS MAKE RUSH FOR WEALTH

RANSACK HIS HOUSE

Pittsburg, Pa., July 6.—A few minutes after it became known today that Frederick Prager had been found dead at his home, 225 High street, north side, neighbors rushed into the house and began ransacking for $11,000 alleged to have been hidden somewhere about the premises. It took a squad of police to clear the house of fortune hunters and save the building from being wrecked.

Prager succumbed during the night to the heat. Three weeks ago his sister, Mrs. Emma Strana, committed suicide, while a few months ago John Strana met a violent death in a mill. The three deaths wiped out the Strana-Prager family and neighbors attempted to get the rumored fortune.

The police will make a thorough search sometime today.

GOVERNMENT HITS AT COAL TRUST

SECRET OF CONTROL

Washington, July 6.—The government will renew the fight to disassociate the great coal carrying railroads from their virtual control of mines and thus vitalize the commodities clause of the interstate commerce law. A test case against the Lehigh Valley railroad was filed today in the U. S. court in Philadelphia.

That the Lehigh Valley Coal company, Coxe Brothers, Inc., the New York and Middle Field Railroad and Coal company and the Locust Mountain Coal and Iron company are not bonafide coal companies but merely adjuncts to the Lehigh Valley railroad and are "devices for evading the commodity clause" is the government's principal complaint.

By proving that the Lehigh Valley railroad is actually the legal owner of the Lehigh Valley Coal company's anthracite or has a pecuniary interest in it, the government hopes to bring its case into line with the recent decision of the supreme court in the commodity clause case, strike down dummy coal companies and force the coal carrying railroads from their control of mines.

While in effect the government's action is a blow to the so-called coal trust, the case is separate from that suit, which is now on appeal to the supreme court.

RIOTS IN AMSTERDAM.

Police and Troopers in Hot Battle With Rioters.

Amsterdam, Netherlands, July 6.—There was hot fighting in the harbor district here between rioters on the one hand and the police and troopers on the other in the early hours of today. The strikers stoned the police and the troops replied with their rifles.

The striking shipping men then produced revolvers and in the fusilade that followed a number of persons were wounded.

The troops ultimately routed the strikers and later patrolled the streets in strong detachments.

CAMPERS FIND A HERMIT'S CACHE

Island in Lake Corey in Michigan Yields Some Queer Treasure.

PIONEER WAS DAFT

Corey, Mich., July 6.—A romance of the days when much of the state of Michigan was a wilderness, as brought to light today when boys of the South Bend, Indiana, Y. M. C. A. summer camp, while digging a hole for a flg staff, brought up a rusty iron box containing pistols, books and several documents.

The lock could not be opened, so the lid was broken. First the discoverers found two rusty pistols of an ancient pattern resting in a bed of flax.

Then followed a motley collection including a plain gold ring apparently the wedding pledge of some pioneer bride, a silver case watch of Swiss manufacture, a small dagger and a rust-stained hunting knife, leather bound books dating from 1767 to 1819, among them a bible, "Children of the Abbey" and "Book of Passion."

There was a number of pennies bearing dates from 1781 to 1854, samples of silver lead and copper ores, arrow heads. Deeds dating back as far as 1789 relating to property at Plymouth, Conn., were found.

Hermit's Queer Letter.

An explanation of mystery was found in a letter left by the owner of the chest in part is as follows:

"This chest is the property of Heskiah Thomas, formerly of New England, later of the Michigan wilderness. A spiritualist of God and my spirit still roam over these lakes in the full moon seasons guarding all my valuable deposited possessions, for they are many and varied. God gave me many wonderful secrets, but because of great sin He took them all away but one—

AVIATORS FLY THE STRAITS OF DOVER

International Racers Go Over to France Easy as Thinking It.

LAST LEG OF RACE

Calais, France, July 6.—The French aviators who descended on the English coast last Monday, took wing from Dover at daybreak and half an hour later settled lightly on the soil of France. Valentine, the Englishman, was left on his native heath.

The flight of the Straights of Dover was accomplished easily, with favorable weather. Vedrines led the way. He ascended at 4:20 o'clock and arrived here at 5:14. The others starting at brief intervals were pretty well bunched with the exception of Renaux and his passenger and Barra. They reached here in this order:

Vidart 5:01, Beaumont 5:05, Gibert 5:12, Garros 5:18, Kimmerling 5:28, Tabeau 5:28, Renaux 5:41 and Barra 7:04. This completes the eighth stage. The next leg will be from Calais to Paris with a stop at Amiens, completing the international circuit between the French and British capitals.

Lisbon, July 6.—The reports of fighting in the streets of Lisbon and elsewhere in Portugal between loyal troops and sympathizers with the monarchists are untrue.

MADRID HAS NO NEWS.

Madrid, July 6.—No news has been received here of the last report of a combat in the streets of Lisbon.

A dispatch from London last night said that a news agency had received a report from the Portuguese capital that teh seamen quartered in the barracks incited by monarchist agitators had attempted an armed revolt. The troops, the dispatch added, quelled the uprising.

FEMALE RAFFLES IS THE BURGLAR

Numerous Jobs in Colorado Springs Charged to a Woman Thief.

SHE BAFFLES POLICE

Colorado Springs, Col., July 6.—A female Raffles, attired in men's clothing, the police say, has been perpetrating the many burglaries that have occurred in the fashionable north end district of Colorado Springs during the last several weeks.

That the burglar is a woman was not known until Tuesday morning. While robbing the home of Mrs. Anna Williamson, the girl allowed a heavy watch fob, which she was in the act of removing from Mrs. Williamson's dresser to strike against the furniture and awakened Mrs. Williamson.

When the latter awoke she saw the girl burglar standing near a window, a street light disclosing her form to be that of a woman attired in men's clothing. The burglar pointed a large revolver at Mrs. Williamson, keeping her closely covered while the female Raffles carefully made her exit through the open window.

ITS INSIDES ARE A SECRET.

Voting Machine Company Denies Inspection of Device.

South Bend, Ind., July 6.—The suit, filed yesterday, to enjoin the Indiana voting machine commission from examining one of the four machines on display here in private, was continued today until next Tuesday to allow Attorney Honan to appear for the commission, which is composed of Everett McGinnis and Walter P. Coale, of Indianapolis, and Harold Van Tamp, of Rochester.

The suit is said to be the result of one of the machine owners' refusal to expose the interior of the machine for public inspection. St. Joseph county is preparing to purchase fifty voting machines.

Portland, Ore., July 6.—At last night's session of the National convention of the Women's Christian Board of Missions, Mrs. Anna R. Atwater, of Indianapolis, was re-elected president.

NORRIS GOES AFTER HILLES

Nebraska Insurgent Says Taft's Secretary is Running Bureau.

CIRCULATES LOT MISINFORMATION

Intimates He is Misrepresenting Boom of LaFollette.

Washington, July 5.—Charges that Charles D. Hilles, secretary to the president, is acting as the head of a "political news bureau," which "suppresses truth" and issues "unfounded and false" reports as to sentiment concerning presidential candidates, were made today in a letter Representative Norris, of Nebraska, insurgent leader in the house, addressed to the Nebraska progressive republican league.

Representative Norris charged that the "suppressed" facts relate to sentiment favoring the candidacy of Senator LaFollette for the presidency.

Taft Between Two Fires.

A factional row over the selection of a republican state chairman for Alabama boiled to the surface at the white house today and has put President Taft in the predicament of choosing between Postmaster General Frank H. Hitchcock and Secretary C. D. Hilles as political adviser to the administration.

P. D. Barker, republican committeeman, and postmaster at Mobile, is backing Peter P. Long for state chairman with the knowledge of Mr. Hitchcock. Secretary Hilles and Booker T. Washington, the negro educator, are said to be backing J. O. Thompson, collector of internal revenue. Alabamans, including many of the most prominent federal officeholders in the state, declared today to the president that a majority of the republicans in the state were for Barker.

The president did not commit himself. He is in an embarrassing position, however, since an endorsement of Barker might be regarded as a turn down for Mr. Hilles and an endorsement of Mr. Thompson might look like a slap at Mr. Hitchcock.

WENDLING GOES TO STATE PRISON

ALL HOPE SUBSIDES

Louisville, Ky., July 6.—With no further hopes held out to him after the highest court of the state had confirmed his sentence to the penitentiary for life, Joseph Wendling, convicted of the murder of eight-year-old Alma Kellner, was taken today to the state penitentiary at Frankfort.

Wendling, a janitor at St. John's Catholic church in this city, left Louisville shortly after the little girl had disappeared in December, 1909. When her body was found in the cellar of a building near the church the officers began a search for Wendling, which covered 16,000 miles and which did not end until several months later when Wendling was arrested in San Francisco.

BAD FIRE IN INDIANAPOLIS.

Storage Tanks of Oil Company Are Threatened.

Indianapolis, July 6.—Fire, thought to have been caused by defective wiring today destroyed the plant of the Indianapolis Pressed Fuel company, State and Deloss streets, threatened the storage tanks of the Western Oil company and drove several families from the houses in the neighborhood. The loss to the fuel company is $40,000.

Men and women formed bucket brigades to save their homes, as the firemen were engaged in protecting the large oil tanks and an adjoining construction plant. It was necessary to direct streams of water a number of times against a large elm tree, which overhung the oil tanks and taking fire, dropped sparks down on the tanks.

Colorado Hunter Badly Injured by Wounded Animal.

Greeley, Col., July 6.—James Gault, an attorney of this place, while hunting rabbits near here yesterday, was attacked by a large jack rabbit after the animal had been wounded and was severely bitten and scratched before the rabbit was killed. Gault had fired on the rabbit and on seeing that he had wounded it ran forward, when the animal turned and suddenly sprang at Gault's face, striking him squarely with all four feet. With difficulty Gault shook the rabbit off and promptly killed it with the stock of his gun.

TEMPERATURE ON DOWNWARD GRADE

Fort Wayne Begins to Note Recession of Terrific Heat Wave.

CHANGE IS WELCOME

"Cooler tonight and Friday with probable local showers" was the declaration of Local Forecaster W. S. Palmer in the Fort Wayne station of the United States weather bureau at 9 o'clock this morning as he glanced up from his study of the telegraphic map before him, completed a moment before when reports had arrived from weather bureau stations all over the country.

It was but a few hours later that Fort Wayne began to detect symptoms of the truth of the weather bureau's assertion that the backbone of the terrific heat wave that has gripped this section for some days was broken. The temperature, which had reached 90 degrees at 11 o'clock today, then began falling, and the noon reading was 89 degrees. The wind veered to the northwest, and the skies carried the first clouds visible for some days. Further decline in temperature was noted at 2 o'clock with the reading at 86 degrees.

Suffering Was Acute.

While the temperature at no time today rose to the point reached in the earlier days of the heated "spell," there was still much discomfort. The extended heated term had begun to make its effect felt and people were less able to cope with the torridity than earlier in the week.

With the continued hot weather today came conditions that approximated a milk famine in Fort Wayne. Several of the big dairy concerns were unable to get a milk supply sufficient to meet the demands, owing to the fact that much of the milk had been soured by the excessively hot weather.

No further heat prostrations were reported, and the prospect of local showers grew more apparent during the afternoon.

The General Conditions.

Concerning the general weather conditions over the country this morning Forecaster Palmer said:

While unusually high temperatures continue over much of the southwest and from the Ohio valley to New England, decidedly cooler weather is reported from much of the Missouri valley, the upper Mississippi valley and the upper lake region. Local showers, heavy in localities, have occurred over a broad area of country extending from Nebraska and eastern Kansas northeastward to Michigan, breaking the heated spell throughout that section of the country. Good rains are reported from Concordia, Kan., Des Moines and Grand Rapids, and at Dubuque a rainfall of 1.36 inches occurred. A thunderstorm is reported from Chicago, where the temperature this morning was six degrees lower than it was yesterday morning.

In this section cooler weather will prevail tonight and Friday and local showers are probable.

FOOD INSPECTOR ON WARNING TOUR

He Orders Decayed Matter Hauled from the Mayflower Mills.

EXPLAINS EGG LAW

State Drug and Food Inspector John T. Willet, of South Bend, arrived in the city this morning on a tour of warning and instruction in regard to the new food laws recently put in to effect. The chief reason of the inspector coming to the city was to investigate and remedy the obnoxious odor which has arisen from the ruins of the Mayflower mills.

Mr. Willet called on the owners of the ruined building this morning and in a conference with them took some important steps toward putting a stop to the odor. He learned that all of the damaged flour is to be sold to the Bass Foundry company for moulding purposes and that the spoiled grain is to be sold to Chicago firms for fertilizer purposes. The inspector ordered all decayed matter to be hauled to the city dumps at once and the owners of the mill have promised to have the stench abated within the next few days.

During his stay in the city Mr. Willet will call on all men who are interested in the produce business and instruct them concerning the new egg laws. It is the purpose of the state health board to put a stop to the selling of spoiled eggs and the trip of Mr. Willet is made to give the produce men some ideas concerning the selling of fresh and cold storage eggs.

WILLIS W. CASE DIES.

Former Fort Wayne Man Expires at His Home in Denver.

Friends in Fort Wayne were today advised by telegraph of the death of Willis W. Case, a former Fort Wayne man, which occurred last night at his home in Denver, Colo. Mr. Case was about 65 years of age and is survived by his widow and two sisters.

Mr. Case removed from Fort Wayne to Denver some twenty-five years ago, and was at the head of the Denver Fire Clay company. While in Fort Wayne he was in the oil and supply business on Columbia street. He was a son of Col. Charles Case, and was united in marriage to a Miss Jennison in this city.

FOUND UNCONSCIOUS.

Restaurant Keeper Overcome by Heat Is In Serious Condition.

Edward Haider, proprietor of a restaurant at 1413 South Broadway, was overcome by the heat about 8:30 o'clock Wednesday evening, and is reported to be in a serious condition. Mr. Haider was about his work as usual Wednesday, but shortly after 8 o'clock in the evening complained to Mrs. Haider of feeling ill, and started for his bedroom to lie down. Mrs. Haider went to the bedroom fifteen or twenty minutes later and found him lying on the floor in an unconscious condition.

WOMAN DEPUTY SHERIFF.

MISS MOLLIE SPICER

Dutchess county, in New York State, had never employed a woman deputy sheriff until Miss Mollie Spicer was recently appointed, but Sheriff John Townsend says he is so well satisfied with the experiment that he thinks now he will organize a corps of female assistants.

PETRO TO FIGHT IN UPPER COURT

Will Appeal in Ten Days to Circuit Court for Renewal.

CASES IN THE COURTS

John Petro, who has been conducting a saloon on the Bluffton road west of the county infirmary, has announced that he will take an appeal to the circuit court from the decision of the county commissioners, who yesterday refused to grant him a renewal of his license. He has ten days in which to perfect this appeal, but the circuit court does not convene until September and he will have to seek a hearing in vacation time if he wants to continue his business.

Four of the men who signed the remonstrance against Petro appeared and said that he was all right personally but that he keeps a dirty place and they thought it ought to be closed. Their remonstrance was not valid because it did not contain names enough for a general kick and set out no specific reasons for asking a refusal of the renewal.

Petro admitted on the stand that he occasionally gets drunk and this was taken as the ground of the refusal. The case will be a test if it is appealed because the court ruling on it will signify whether or not the board has any discretionary power under the Proctor law.

Property to Wife.

Under the will of Heinrich Thiesman all his property is left to his wife absolutely except a farm of twenty acres which goes to Gustav Thiesman, a son, at the death of his mother. The balance of the estate is to belong to the wife in fee and the son is to pay to a brother and sister $200 when he takes possession of the farm.

Under the will of Mrs. Mary Spice all her estate after the payment of her debts will go to Bethany Presbyterian church. The Tristate Trust company is appointed executor of the estate and no estimate of its value has been filed in the courts.

Remains at School.

At the close of the hearing of habeas corpus proceedings in which Charles W. Argerbright sought to secure the custody of his daughter who had been placed by his divorced wife in the Indiana School for Feeble-minded Youth, Judge O'Rourke held in the circuit court today that the child must remain a ward of the institution, but that it can be given vacations in the discretion of Supt. Albert E. Carroll.

Election Date is Fixed.

In the commissioners' court today the date for the local option election in Lafayette township was fixed for July 27. The board selected J. W. Keplinger and Alva Hayden as commissioners; A. F. Wilson and Elias Kohr, judges, and Bert Robinson and Elmer Stump, clerks.

THREE WERE INJURED.

Roof Falls Carrying Three Workmen Ten Feet to Ground.

Three men, who were engaged in wrecking the old livery stable on the site of the new G. E. Bursley warehouse, corner of Clinton and Superior, were injured Wednesday afternoon when a piece of the roof, which they were tearing up, fell to the ground, a distance of ten feet, carrying them with it. James Wolf, a laborer, was injured about the abdomen; J. S. Beagles, a carpenter, received a severe scalp wound, and Levi Summers, a laborer was severely bruised, but was able to return to work this morning. The injuries of the other two are not serious and it is expected that they will be back to work within two or three days.

CULVER INSTRUCTOR DIES.

Culver, Ind., July 6.—Lieutenant Commander Thomas H. Gignilliat, U. S. N., retired, for ten years naval instructor in the Culver Summer Naval school, is dead in Asheville, N. C., according to word received here today. He was the first commander of the First battalion of Indiana which was organized two years ago.

the least of them—the turning of sable stones into gold. I have buried this secret by the body of Old Duckwing in the big swamp. God rest my soul. God has filled the earth with gold. Devils do not believe it, but has He not promised 'Seek and find'? The blue heron is wise, and the night owl, but man is an ass, for he walketh not in the ways of the Most High."

Story of the Recluse.

A little of the story of the peculiar old hermit, Thomas, is known here. George Knevels, who lives in a portion of a house built by Thomas, says that as a boy he recollects finding carefully secreted collections of pebbles in the house.

It is said that Thomas' wife deserted him and his queerness became noticeable about the same time. He roamed the woods talking to the trees and animals and believed that he could transmute certain stones into gold.

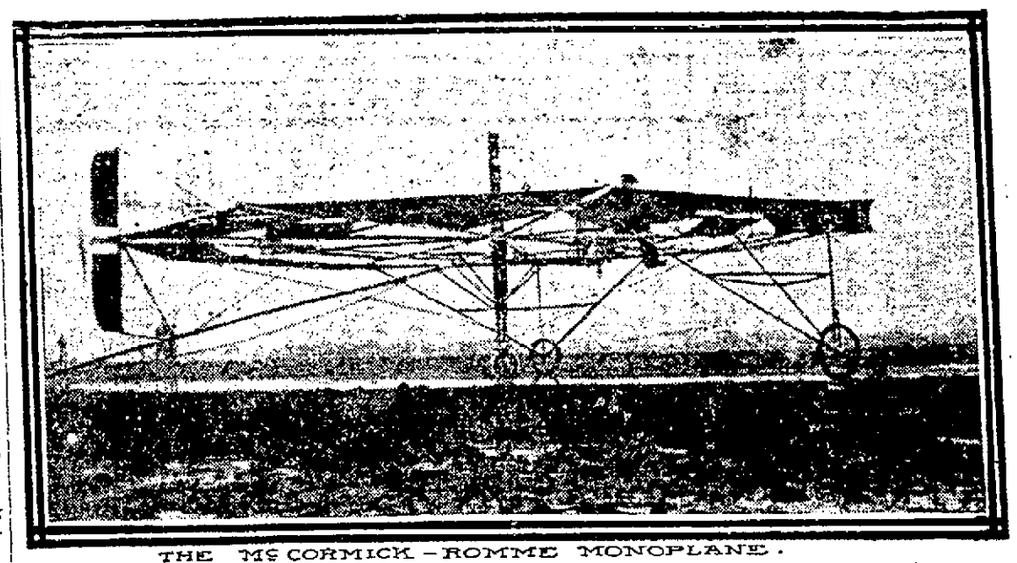
After selling his home here Thomas moved to an island in the lake, on which, in one part of his letter he refers to as the "abode of the seven devils."

According to another letter found in the box there is another chest buried on the island. A map, which was among the contents, gives directions for finding still another chest, the key to which is said by the owner to be hidden in a tree. The whole neighborhood is excited over a search, immediately begun, for the remaining chests.

Thomas' body was found in the woods about fifty years ago. He had been frozen to death.

Col. and Mrs. W. T. Durbin, of Anderson, were in the city last evening in the course of an auto trip.

Millionaire Flies in Machine of Own Design



THE McCORMICK-ROMME MONOPLANE.

Harold F. McCormick, the multi-millionnaire of Chicago, has made a flight in an aeroplane which he designed and had built under his own direction.

Mr. McCormick did not wish undue publicity given to his flights, and for that reason he visited the aviation field at a time when he would be least likely to attract attention. The McCormick machine embodies an entirely new idea. The wings or planes, instead of being crosswise, are lengthwise. The idea is to give the machine longitudinal stability; in other words, to lessen the danger of taking a header.

WILL GO IN TWO BIG DELEGATIONS

Fort Wayne Shriners and Elks Leave Late in Week for East.

IN SPECIAL TRAINS

Each with a big delegation and traveling in two special trains, Fort Wayne Shriners and Elks will leave late in the present week on eastern pilgrimages. The Shriners go to Rochester, N. Y., for the annual session of the imperial council, and the Elks are bound for the national convention of the order at Atlantic City. Many of the members of each organization will be accompanied by their wives.

The Shriners will leave at 9 o'clock Sunday night in a special train over the Nickel Plate railroad, consisting of a baggage car, a day coach and three sleepers. There will be seventy-five in the party, including the patrol of twenty-seven members and the band with a membership of nineteen. The party will breakfast at Buffalo Monday morning, reaching Rochester at 11 o'clock. Here headquarters will be established at the Osborne hotel, where the patrols from Washington, Hartford and Binghampton, N. Y., will also be quartered. Returning the Shriners will leave Rochester Thursday night, arriving in Fort Wayne Friday at noon.

Elks Leave Saturday.

The Elks will leave Fort Wayne Saturday evening at 7:40 o'clock in a special train of five Pullman cars, a baggage car and a diner, on the Pennsylvania railroad for the Atlantic City convention. Fort Wayne headquarters at Atlantic City will be at Hotel Whittaker. Aboard the special when it leaves Fort Wayne will be also the Elks from Gary, Valparaiso, Warsaw, Kendallville, Ligonier, Wabash and Decatur.

MAY OUST WOMAN FROM HER OFFICE

TRUSTEES BEGIN IT

Auburn, Ind., July 6.—Suit was begun in the circuit court today to oust Dr. Lida Leasure from the office of county superintendent of DeKalb county. George Shaffer, George Burtzner, C. H. Downed and W. G. Erick, four trustees, filed the suit, basing their action on the grounds that Dr. Leasure does not possess the qualifications required by law. She has held the office since Jan. 1.

TREATY HAS FINE PROSPECT.

Anglo-American Arbitration Pact Will Soon Be Signed.

London, July 6.—The British government is so satisfied with the progress of the American-British arbitration treaty that Sir Edward Grey, the secretary of foreign affairs, was able to announce in the house of commons today that there was every prospect that the peace pact would be signed very soon.

"I believe that the United States government and ourselves are now in substantial agreement as regards the details of the draft of a treaty," he said.

TROOPS TO FOIL LYNCHERS.

Denver, Col., July 6.—Governor Shafroth today ordered out a company of militia at LaJunta, Col., to prevent the possible lynching of Ben Harris, the negro accused of killing Chief of Police Craig at Rocky Ford Tuesday night. Harris was captured today at Rocky Ford and hurried to LaJunta in an automobile. It is reported that a mob is forming at Rocky Ford to lynch Harris. Governor Shafroth has notified three other companies to be ready to go to the scene if required.

Gus Willson has taken a clerical position with the Wayno Manufacturing company.

grees. Later the wind shifted from the west to north and the mercury gradually dropped until at 7 o'clock it stood at 80 degrees, six points lower than at the same hour yesterday. At 9 o'clock the temperature was 78, compared with 93 for the same hour yesterday.

The official weather forecaster predicts cooler, unsettled weather for today with thunderstorms for tonight.

The forecast for Friday is clear and cool.

RELIEF IN THE SOUTHWEST.

Kansas City, Mo., July 6.—With the temperature over the southwest reading from 5 to 10 degrees lower than at the same hour yesterday and light showers in sight over most of the territory, relief from the extreme heat of the last four days was predicted today by the local forecaster. Yesterday's climax of the heat wave will not be reached today by from 10 to 15 degrees, he said.

At Fort Worth, Texas, a slight rain fell today. Last night an inch of rain fell at Niobrara, Neb. The temperature at Norfolk, Neb., showed a drop of nearly 30 degrees at 7 o'clock this morning and at North Platte, Neb., the temperature was 58 at that hour.

In the twenty-four hours ended at 7 o'clock this morning there were nine deaths from heat and twenty prostrations in Kansas City, most of them coming late last night and early today. The temperature dropped from 90 at 1 a. m. to 80 at 7 a. m. At Oklahoma City and Wichita it was 76, at Little RCock, Ark., 72, and at Fort Worth 74 at 7 o'clock.

CHILLY IN THE FAR WEST.

Denver, Col., July 6.—The temperature at Denver at 9 o'clock this morning was 55 above and rain has been falling for several hours.

What is more important to the sizzling east these conditions, according to the local weather bureau, are rapidly moving eastward over Nebraska, Kansas and Iowa and before nightfall should be cooling Chicago and the lake region.

Temperatures in Wyoming, Colorado and the Rocky mountain region this morning are from ten to fifteen degrees below the seasonal average, and the welcome cool wave is rapidly moving eastward.

NEW YORK IS SIZZLING.

New York, July 6.—A blockade in the subway today capped the misery of the hot wave. When the stalled trains finally crept into the underground stations, fainting passengers were helped out by the score.

Many had to be carried to nearby drugstores and some taken to hospitals. While the blockade lasted, the list of heat prostrations grew faster than at any previous time since the extreme hot weather began.

There was no change for the better today, compared with Wednesday. At 10 o'clock the mercury had reached 84 and six deaths were reported up to that time. While the heat was considerably less severe than on Monday and Tuesday, the cumulative effect of four days of suffering kept the hospitals busy with new arrivals. One man gave up the struggle against the weather and threw himself in front of a railroad train on the upper side. His legs were cut off and he will die.

Relief is promised by tomorrow, by the help of thunder showers tonight.

STILL HOT IN PITTSBURG.

Pittsburg, July 6.—The oppressive heat continues here today. At 9 o'clock this morning the thermometer registered 87 degrees, a jump of eight degrees an hour. There is no indication that the hot spell which started last Friday will be broken today.

ELEVEN MEN STABBED.

An Affray Over Girl at Oklahoma Dance Causes Busy Time.

Muskogee, Okla., July 6.—A quarrel over a girl at a country dance nine miles south of this city today resulted in a general fight in which eleven men were stabbed. It is believed one of the injured will die. The wounds of several are serious.

CITY BREVITIES.

In order to raise funds to carry on the local work the Salvation Army will give an ice cream social Monday evening, on the law at the residence of Mrs. Hamilton Williafs, corner of Clinton and Lewis streets.

Ralph Barr, of Kendallville, deputy prosecutor of Noble county, who underwent an operation for appendicitis at St. Joseph's hospital last Saturday, is reported to be doing nicely.

ARRAIGN THE GIRLS WHO SHOT STOKES

Victim of Wrath of Two Women Tells His Own Story of It.

MUCH WRONGED MAN

New York, July 6.—Miss Ethel Conrad and Miss Lillian Graham today appeared in the Tombs police court for examination on the charge of attempting to murder W. E. D. Stokes, the millionaire hotel man. They were confronted by Mr. Stokes who looked pale and worn. The girls are accompanied by Mrs. John Singleton, formerly of Los Angeles, Miss Graham's wealthy sister.

Mr. Stokes narrated the events of June 7 when he was shot. He said Miss Conrad called him on the telephone and told him Miss Graham had gone to Europe and asked him to call and get letters Miss Graham had left for him.

"Miss Conrad smiled sweetly," continued the witness, when she received him at the apartment, leaving him alone for a moment, saying she would go for the letters. When she returned, said Stokes, she bolted the door behind her and approached with her hands behind her back.

"At the same time," Stokes testified, "at the door into the hall I saw Miss Graham creeping toward me with a revolver levelled at me. Stepping in front of me she said, 'Now I have got you.'"

Then, continued Stokes, Miss Graham told him he must pay for "doing her great moral damage," defaming her mother and sister. They told him, he said, that unless he complied with their demands they would kill him and "would have no difficulty getting rid of his body."

HAMPERED BY VANDALS.

Battery B's Display at Pierceton Was Somewhat Crippled.

Batter B, of this city, which sent a platoon of men and two of its guns to Pierceton as the stellar feature of the Fourth of July celebration, was seriously hampered in its work by the act of vandals in the Kosciusko county town.

The guns were shipped to Pierceton in advance and stored in a barn there to await the coming of the artillerymen. On the night of July 2 the firing pins which had been removed from the guns and hidden for safety, were stolen. The loss was discovered in time to replace the pins, but on the night of July 3 the blocks were stolen from the guns and the salutes could not be fired. The artillerymen gave the drills as advertised, but the absence of the firing feature crippled the attraction considerably. On the evening of the Fourth the firing pins and blocks, tied in a gunnysack, were discovered in the power plant at Pierceton, where they had been tossed in through a rear window by unknown parties.

Mrs. James W. Beattie and daughter will leave Friday for Battle Creek, Mich., where Mrs. Beattie will spend two month in the normal school of physical education, which is connected with the sanitarium doing special work.

MRS. SHONTS TO SUE.

MRS. THEODORE P. SHONTS

In a report emanating from Paris Mrs. Theodore P. Shonts, wife of the railroad man, of New York, has brought suit for separation. Mrs. Shonts will not demand absolute divorce. The case, it is expected, will be heard in the Supreme Court in New York.

DR. CHAPMAN TO LEAD SERVICES

EVANGELIST'S PLANS

Atlantic City, N. J., July 6.—A unique feature of the big international Christian Endeavor convention which convenes at Atlantic City today will be the early morning services conducted by Rev. Dr. J. Wilbur Chapman at 6:30 a. m. in the temple on the million dollar pier. Thousands of Endeavorers will attend and think it no hardship to each morning gather for this prayer and praise service and to listen to the quiet hour talks which as in years past have been so helpful. Dr. Chapman has for many years appeared on Christian Endeavor programs, but owing to his recent world tours he has been unable to attend. Endeavorers will then gladly welcome him at this meeting by the sea. The experience will be a never-to-be-forgotten one.

Dr. Chapman will start the middle of next February from the Pacific coast for Australia on another world tour, which will include evangelistic campaigns in China, Japan, India, South Africa and South America. Eighteen months will be devoted to this tour. He will be accompanied by Charles M. Alexander, the noted gospel singer and choir leader, and Robert Harkness, the Australian pianist.

On October 8 Dr. Chapman and Mr. Alexander begin a series of meetings in Belfast, Ireland, continuing for seven weeks. Returning to this country Dr. Chapman will accompany Rev. Dr. John F. Carson, of Brooklyn, moderator of the Presbyterian General Assembly, on a tour of the great cities of this country for a series of interdenominational evangelistic conferences.

party on his flagship, the Mayflower, with a number of prominent senators as his guests. The president will board the Mayflower at Philadelphia on the night of July 7, after speaking to the Christian Endeavor convention at Atlantic City on "International Peace and Arbitration."

From Philadelphia the Mayflower will go to sea. She will reach Hampton Roads probably Sunday night and Washington early Monday.

RUNAWAY CAUSES EXCITEMENT.

A horse attached to a light farm wagon and owned by Michael Spitz, a farmer residing two miles north of the city, ran away this morning and broke the singletree of the wagon and the harness in several places. The horse had been standing hitched in front of the Parrot art store, on East Berry street, and becoming frightened broke the bridle and started to run west on Berry at a good rate of speed, with the wagon swinging from side to side, and people scattering in all directions. The horse was stopped just in front of the court house by a traffic policeman and several men.

Second Convention of Associated Clubs of Thirteenth District on July 13.

Warsaw, Ind., July 6.—The second convention of the association of clubs of the Thirteenth congressional district will be held at Westminster hotel, Winona Lake, July 13, during the three days congress of the Winona Woman's Summer club.

The three days' program of the Summer club will consist of a household economics day, a state federation day, and the annual convention of the Thirteenth district of the Indiana Federation of Clubs.

The principal speakers at the congress will be Mrs. Grace Julian Clarke, president of the State Federation; Miss Vida Newsome, state corresponding secretary; Mrs. Olaf N. Guldlin, chairman of the household economics department of the General Federation of Women's Clubs; Prof. C. H. Bernard, state chemist; Mrs. Lew G. Ellingham, Mrs. Albion Fellows Bacon and Mrs. Charles Carrol Brown.

On July 13, district convention day, the program will begin at 1:30 p. m., with Mrs. Richard Elbel, district chairman, presiding. The afternoon program will consist of a vocal solo by Mrs. James Frazer, of Warsaw; an address of welcome by Mrs. William Conrad, followed by a response by Mrs. Richard Elbel, of South Bend; a business session; a paper on parents-teachers clubs and their possibilities by Mrs. Charles Carrol Brown, and an address by Mrs. Grace Julian Clarke on woman's responsibility to the community. The last mentioned subjects will be open to general discussion. Mrs. Clarke will preside at the evening meeting.

GREAT DAY AT WINONA.

More Than 7,000 Attend Big Celebration—No Accidents.

Warsaw, Ind., July 6.—Despite the intense heat the crowd at Winona Lake was one of the largest that has ever been there on a Fourth of July. Winona was the mecca for many people from all parts of northern Indiana, and incoming trains and interurbans were crowded to the limit throughout the day. It was given out at the main entrance gate at 8 o'clock in the evening that more than 7,000 single-day tickets had been sold.

The crowd in the evening was the largest, the attendance at the Mardi Gras spectacle being larger than was expected by the most optimistic members of the management. The Mardi Gras spectacle was given without a single mishap. The crowd was well handled throughout the day, and not a single mishap was reported. The Winona Interurban comany, by its efficient management, handled the crowd in a very satisfactory manner despite the fact that the service is badly crippled by the street improvement work that is going on along East Center street.

ATTACKED BY BOAR.

Enraged Animal Inflicts Painful Wounds On Farmer.

Huntington, Ind., July 6.—Attacked by an enraged boar at the Charles Smith farm north of the city on the Mishler road, John Feightner, aged fifty, was seriously injured Tuesday morning. A long gash in his right leg and reaching the bone resulted from the animal's teeth in its savage attack. Numerous bruises about his body resulted when Mr. Feightner was thrown to the ground but more serious and fatal results were prevented by others who rushed to his assistance. Since the accident Mr. Feightner has been confined to his bed and his condition is regarded as serious. Blood poisoning often results from such injuries but the attending surgeon expresses the opinion that the injured man will be able to leave his bed within a week if no unlooked for complications arise.

COLD BLOODED STEALING.

Markle, Ind., July 6.—A hard-headed thief got in his dirty work at this place Tuesday afternoon, during the excitement attendant upon the drowning of Bert Thompson. The clothing of Ralph Spaulding and John Martz, both of whom were helping in the search for Thompson's body, was left lying ungarded on the river bank, some distance up stream. When Spaulding recovered his clothes he discovered that the pockets had been rifled and $9 or $10 stolen. Mr. Martz reported that he lost about $2 from his pockets.

AUBURN WOMAN IN ROLE OF HEROINE

Mrs. Dr. J. E. Cooper Saves Four Children from Drowning—Collapses After Deed.

Auburn, Ind., July 6.—Thinking only of the safety of four small children who were struggling for life in a deep hole in the St. Joe river, near Spencerville, Mrs. Dr. J. E. Cooper risked her own life and brought the youngsters safely back to shore.

Dr. Cooper and family and four small children of C. L. Bauer, of this city, drove to the river, on the afternoon of the Fourth, for an outing. The children insisted on wading in the water and Mrs. Cooper finally consented. The four Bauer children were more adventurous than the Cooper children, and were soon wading out on a sand bar. Suddenly little Ben Bauer disappeared under the water's surface. The other children tried to pull him out and in a moment four youngsters were tsruggling for life in a deep hole of the river. Mrs. Cooper plunged into the death-trap and trusting to her ability at swimming she at last brought the frightened children to shore.

After the heroic deed was finished Mrs. Cooper collapsed from the effects of the shock on her nerves.

LITTLE LAD BADLY HURT.

Wheels of Wagon Tear Boy's Scalp Loose.

Milford, Ind., July 6.—Earl, the 2½-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. Emery Cooper, of two miles east of this place, was seriously injured in a terrible accident of Tuesday. The little boy was standing near one of the wheels of a heavy wagon, driven by his father, when the horses started suddenly. The little boy was knocked down and the wheel passed over his head.

The little fellow's scalp was torn loose and was badly cut. The accident happened in the road so that the wound was ground full of sand and gravel. This was one of the bad features of the accident, because it endangers the little boy's life from tetanus or blood poison. Dr. W. O. Benson, of this place, and Dr. A. G. McDonald, of Warsaw, dressed the wound.

TAKES FINAL TEST

Columbia City, Ind., July 6.—Major J. R. Harrison, of this city, accompanied his son, Ray Harrison, to Chicago Tuesday night and the young man took the physical examination at Fort Sheridan Wednesday at 9 o'clock for admission to West Point. He took the mental examination at Washington some time ago and passed with a good grade, but failed in the physical test because of being a little run down incident to the close confinement in his preparation. It is now practically assured that he passed the test Wednesday and will enter West Point to begin the course next year.

FINDS NEST OF RATTLERS.

Warsaw, Ind., July 6.—Noah Messick, an old time hunter, with his brother William, were picking berries recently in the hills northeast of Milford, and while engaged in their work, they came upon some old skunk or groundhog borroughs. They at once took a recess from berry picking and went into the fur and whang leather business, expecting to find some animals in the discovered ground nests. After digging for a time they came upon a nest of rattlesnakes and killed until they had seventeen of the poisonous reptiles on the cooling board. The largest of the exhibit measured three feet four inches.

STRUCK BY PULLEY.

Wabash, Ind., July 6.—Roy Lewis, of this city, was probably fatally injured while unloading hay at the home of his father-in-law Tuesday at noon. A piece of a pulley used in the barn floor broke while under a strain and struck him over the right kidney, probably bursting it and inflicting dangerous, if not fatal injuries. He is in a very serious condition and it will be several days before the exact extent of his injuries will be known.

GOOD BUSINESS AT BANK.

Kendallville, Ind., July 6.—The new postal savings bank opened for business in the Kendallville postoffice yesterday morning and according to the statement of Assistant Postmaster Harry Bodenhafer, if the business of the opening day may be considered as a criterion, the bank will have deposits amounting to $100,000 before the first year is over.

CROWD ENJOYS RACES.

Markle, Ind., July 6.—There was an old time Fourth of July celebration Tuesday at this place, with a big crowd in attendance. The races in the afternoon were the stellar attraction for most of the crowd.

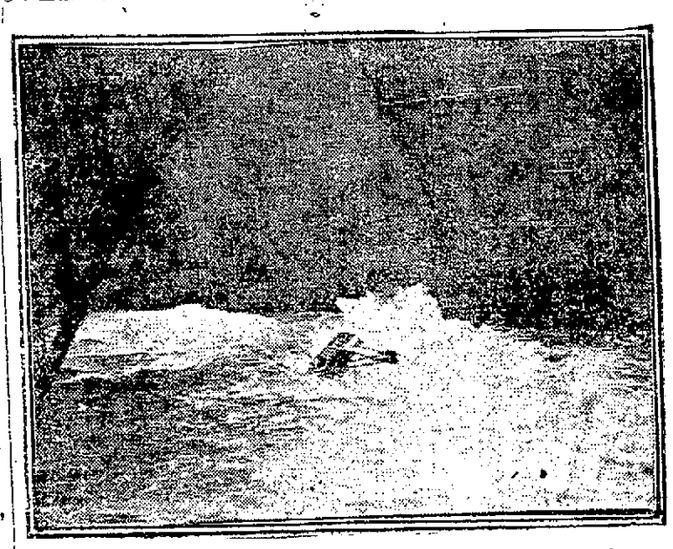
OVER NIAGARA FALLS IN AN AEROPLANE.



The above photograph shows Lincoln Beachey and his aeroplane in one of the most remarkable flights ever attempted. Cheered by fifty thousand persons, he flew over the Horseshoe Falls, down the gorge under the steel arch bridge and landed on the Canadian side of the torrent.

Better and Worse.

A philosopher always knows that the weather might be worse, and a well balanced person often knows that it might be better.—Chicago News.

Of More Importance.

Betty may not be very worldly wise, but she is practical. She knows enough to take a common sense view of things sentimental as well as material. So when she listened to the proposal of the young man she is fond of she couldn't help saying what she did.

"If you reject me, Betty, dear," he urged in a final appeal, "I shall never never love another. It will be the end."

"And if I accept you," she asked, "does the same thing hold good?"—Philadelphia Times.

A Suggestion.

"Hiram," said the politician's wife, "did you say we must economize?"

"Emphatically."

"Well, how would it do to move into one of those districts where votes cost only a dollar apiece?"—Washington Star.

No Real Necessity.

"They eloped, didn't they?"

"Yes; it was considered an elopement, but the young man learned afterward that the girl's father furnished the automobile."—Chicago Tribune.

LABOR HEAD HAS RESIGNED.

O. P. Smith, Vice President of Indiana Federation Quits.

Logansport, Ind., July 6.—O. P. Smith, national labor organizer and first vice president of the Indiana Federation of Labor, has tendered his resignation from the latter office. The resignation is directed to Edgar A. Perkins, head of the state federation. Mr. Smith declined to make a statement in the connection.

It is, however, understood that internal political trouble and alleged favoritism in the state organization impelled the resignation. Mr. Smith's term would have run until January 1, 1912.

WHY SWELL UP?

Here is a city of 70,000.

It is spreading a propaganda for the City Beautiful.

It is employing at great cost noted engineers to plan a remodeled and greatly extended sewer system.

It is pressing forward for a magnificent scheme of river improvements.

It has health authorities honestly and diligently attempting to enforce the ordinances and regulations designed to promote public cleanliness and conserve public health.

It has invested millions in buildings to house the public schools and expends annually hundreds of thousands for public education.

It is great in commerce and industry.

It has a vast wealth more equably distributed than any community of its class in the country.

It is celebrated as one of the most distinctly home-owning cities in the United States.

It has commercial bodies that proclaim the city's greatness abroad and preach the material advantages and spiritual and moral virtues which make Fort Wayne superlatively desirable as a place of residence.

It has all these—wealth, industry, prosperity, homes, churches, schools, culture, society, ambitions, aspirations and a future.

But it has the most lamentable failure in its system for taking care of garbage doubtless to be found in the whole country.

An even if it is not the worst it is much worse than the people of this city have any reason to tolerate.

We preach cleanliness and promote filth.

We profess a love of the beautiful and stand for rotting garbage heaps in backyards and alleys.

We boast of progress in government and the government encourages and abets the filth and foulness that are accumulated and fermenting in thousands of premises in every section of the city through a prolonged season of most intense heat the city's records can show

Why boast and brag? Why toot the horn and swell up with pride and glow with aspiration while we tolerate conditions of which we should be afraid if not ashamed?

The people of this city do not feel that way about it. They want a remedy. The administration and city council can provide it.

Up, folks, and at them.

REPUBLICAN REORGANIZATION.

The visit of President Taft to Indianapolis has given new impetus to the movement among the more regular republicans of Indiana for reorganization and harmony. "Get together behind Taft for 1912" appears to be the slogan of the reorganizers and former Vice President Fairbanks either has taken or by common consent has been given the leadership of the movement. Nowhere does there appear any mention of former Senator Beveridge in the consultations for a revivified party or in the discussions dealing with the tentative plans. Perhaps that may come later, for it will hardly be considered good strategy to ignore Beveridge and the Beveridge following. With at least the putative leadership embodied in Mr. Fairbanks there will not seem to be in store for Beveridge anything better than a secondary place in the recognized party and this outlook is made the more plausible by the declared purpose of the regulars who are reaching for control to put the party in Indiana militantly behind Taft and pledge him a harmonious and fighting delegation in the next national convention. There remains plenty of time before the preliminary activities of the next campaign should openly begin to effect the reorganization and the signs are that the most will be made of it. With two straight defeats of the party in Indiana after fourteen years of an unbroken series of triumphs and the same period of an uninterrupted control of the government and patronage of the state, with both United States senatorships and almost the whole congressional delegation in the hands of the democrats and with the party torn and almost dismembered by the war of the factions it is natural that harmony should be the cry and reorganization the purpose of the leaders. And it is natural, too, that in the midst of this condition the general gaze of the reorganizers should rest with some fondness and aspiration upon the tall figure of him under whose leadership the party's long course of triumph was achieved. The position of Mr. Fairbanks is not artificial; his attitude is not forced. But seeing this, and remembering the recent absolution of the scintillant Beveridge, the onlooker from the side is moved to inquire, where does he come in?

Reports from all sections show that the reformed Fourth of July has taken hold. The death list, it seems probable, will finally be shown as lower than last year and the total number of casualties and the aggregate fire loss much under those of former years. The progress of the "safe and sane" crusade is encouraging if not altogether satisfactory and this year's results are a happy omen of the time coming when the people of the United States will not undertake to shoot themselves to pieces and burn up their cities to make the eagle scream.

Champ Clark is said to be sacrificing a thousand dollars a week that he would be pocketing as a Chautauqua performer if it were not for the extra session of congress. Still, it may cheer him up a bit to reflect that what is his loss is the country's gain and that the sacrifice may bring its reward on democratic banners emblazoned with "Clark and (fill in here with your own favorite for place)."

The basis of a reorganized republican party in Indiana does not make any provision for alliance or coalition with the progressive republican party which will be an entity as soon as Senator Jonathan Bourne can find time to come out here and organize it.

Senator Cummins is doing his best to make it clear that there are some things a president can do which a fully qualified insurgent needs more than a year or two to forget or forgive.

Garbage breeds flies. Flies carry contagion. Contagion kills the people. The people stand for the garbage. Who is to blame?

If your garbage can is neglected make complaint to the city hall. Responsibility lies there and don't let it lie to you.

Near freezing in the far northwest. Think of that and pity the poor folks who have to wear winter coats and hose.

Even the corn, it appears, can get too much of a good thing.

THE PEOPLE VS. PRIVILEGE—THE INCOME TAX ISSUE.

(New York American.)

Everybody who has looked into the history and present status of the federal income tax controversy knows that there is no issue involved except the one simple issue that is sifting this government at the judgment seat of nations—the issue between the people and privilege.

The question in its present shape was laid before the country by a nearly unanimous vote of the sixty-first congress. Thirty states have already ratified the constitutional amendment thus proposed by the national legislature. But everything depends upon New York. It is in New York that the tide of the battle must eventually turn, because the hughest and most pampered fortunes are housed here.

New York was shamefully disgraced by the assembly last year. The income tax passed the senate then as it has now. But it was defeated in the assembly by the infamous treachery of the "old guard."

It is well remembered how, on that occasion, the republican machine carefully economized its meanness—spending no more than was necessary—how Assemblyman Gerhardt and "Mitchie" Friend were drafted at the last moment to turn the trick. As a featherweight may turn an even scale of tons, the machine shifted these light mortals to the other side, and the great cause of the people went into the air. It was decided for the moment—by that degraded assembly—that the government of the union cannot, even in the most desperate crisis of its life, draft the dollars of fat pocketbooks for its defense. The machine can tax the incomes of privilege, but the United States cannot!

This present assembly was elected by the revulsion of the people against that assembly. The heads of machine politicians are of wood and brass, to be sure. But how is it possible that this assembly can do over again what its predecessor did—in such a whirlwind of public contempt?

In this battle for a principle of taxation the people are confronted, not by an opposite principle—nor by an opposite party—but by a regiment of Hessians, under one party flag or another, with the pay of plutocracy in their pockets and its arbitrary taxing power at their backs.

Those assemblymen who followed the leading of that semi-income tax brief by Standard Oil lawyers, which was laid upon every desk in the assembly at the critical moment last session, did not need to read it. It was not addressed to their intellects, but to their stomachs and their fears.

It was the double-cross of gilded hoboism—the mystic sign of the free-masonry of greed.

The issue of the income tax is drawn along the natural lines of cleavage between honest and illegitimate wealth. Those who take goods by fraud and keep them by force are determined to use the taxing power to frame tariffs that subsidize their success.

They hate a tax that is laid, in equity and fraternity, upon the shoulders that are able to bear it.

Honest business men have nothing to fear from a tax of this sort. It is indeed the only kind of a tax that adjusts itself automatically to the fluctuations of commercial fortune—easing the burden whenever business is bad and asking only that a business man shall share with the commonwealth a fraction of his prosperity and success.

It follows that assemblymen who oppose the income tax resolution will advertise themselves to their constituents and the public as depending for their political promotion, not upon the people or any legitimate business, but upon the powers of corruption.

BECAUSE IT'S THE EXCEPTION.

(South Bend Times.)

The head of a news-gathering association, in the course of one of the congressional investigations recently, said:

"The minister who preaches the gospel of John Wesley steadily for forty years is never heard of, but a man who preaches infidelity for one Sunday is advertised all over the land. The great trend of the world does not find expression in the news of the day. If you lived in France or Switzerland the only thing you would learn of this country would be of lynchings, murders and railway accidents. The general trend of our life is never mentioned.

"The worst reporters in the world are the private citizens who give information to the newspapers."

This preponderance of "evil tidings" in the news columns of the newspapers may not after all be so uncomplimentary to society as might at first appear. It is given as "news" because it is exceptional—out of the regular experience. If the general trend of life was evil the occasional good deeds would be the "news" and doubtless be so reported.

The gentle rain, the warmth and sunshine promoting vegetable growth and conducing to comfort are so common as not to need remark. But the tornado devastating a locality and destroying life is rare enough to be news. So, also, of extreme heat or cold causing suffering or drouth—as compared with mild weather in winter or summer it is exceptional and, therefore, news. The same is true in the actions of mankind. The usual experience is of well-ordered lives, and there is no "news" in chronicling their events.

Therefore, it is not an unmitigated cause for regret that so many of the news columns of the press are devoted to tales of disaster, and recitals harrowing to the sensitive, and often revolting. They are given prominence because they are rare and exceptional.

TWENTY-FIVE YEARS AGO

What the Sentinel Had to Say About Persons and Events Twenty-Five Years Ago.

B. F. McCarthy, of the state pension office, was in the city over Sunday.

The Fourth in Fort Wayne bubbled over with patriotism, picnics and fights.

A. D. Cressler, accompanied by his estimate clerk, Adolph Schust, went to Peru this morning to figure on some new gas works.

Jacob F. Schaefenacker and Maria Belsdner, Peter J. Rebar and Anna Gearin, Louis A. Parrott and Matilda Kline, George Ross and Doretta Kuckmann celebrated the Fourth by getting married.

Hon. Robert Lowry has been invited to deliver the oration at a celebration August 20 at Fallen Timbers, an old military post up the Maumee river from Toledo.

It is estimated that since Saturday $5,000 has been shot away in powder and fireworks here. The Fort Wayne Rifles fired volley after volley of blank cartridges out of the MacDougal block last night.

The Gazette complains about taking people out of Fort Wayne. What else is there to do? There is not a park, not a bench in the court house yard nor a place where a stranger can sit down save in a beer saloon or at a beer picnic.

The city board of equalization will be in session each day this week from 10 to 2 o'clock. A few evening sessions are advised by City Treasurer Berghoff so that shopmen can be heard. The board includes City Assessor Reese, Clerk Rockhill and Councilmen Doehrman, Ely, Kensill, Michael, Racine, Read, Scheid, Schwartz and Tresselt.

COL CODY'S FAREWELL

30 Year Era of the Spirit of Light.

No life span of man has witnessed such general world progression as that which has passed in the last fifty or sixty years, the last thirty being especially prolific in wonders. For instance, in 1881, Col. Cody, "Buffalo Bill," was gathering wild horses, wild buffalo, elk, deer, antelope, Rocky Mountain sheep, and wild horses of the plains; also famous Indians just from off the war path, with white contemporaries, such as plainsmen, hunters, cowboys and army scouts to visit the east for mutual advantage. The Indian saw the overwhelming numbers and the immensity of the white man's domain, and the white men of the east were enlightened on the subject and educated to a better understanding of the dawning of peace in, and the agricultural possibilities of, the grandest part of the empire, then known as the wild west. In that same year, 1881, Thos. A. Edison, who has invented the paper-carbon lamp, had the world wondering if he would be capable to or had really "subdivided the electric light," succeeded in illuminating his house, fields and garden around it, with this now illimitable industrial factor. At the same time, Graham Bell had perfected and was arranging to have the first "central" telephone bureau in Pearl street, near Fulton, New York.

To the present generation how simple, how familiar, how facile to comprehend the now known difficulties once so hidden, yet how easy to find fault with, testifying indeed that "familiarity breeds contempt." What are wonders and miracles to one generation are matters of slight importance to another. Just think of the millions of telephones in the world, the electrical wireless talking through air; night made as light as day; in fact, $15,000,000,000 invested in this country alone in the application of a science that is yet an infant! The men who were factors in bringing about these great results have retired or about to finish their labors and for the same reason that prompts Col. Cody, Buffalo Bill, who, like them, can look back with pride and pleasure to the illuminating or untraveled ignorance on the subject he has made familiar and, who can see the glorious work resulting from the strenuous labors and duties he is about to resign. Development of the vast country, once supposed to be a desert, has proven of inestimable value and added as greatly to the wealth of the world as has the results of the labors of his coadjutors in this work of enlightenment during the 30 year era of the spirit of light. Col. Cody makes his last visit to your city, when he will present the combined history and splendors of the Wild West and Far East, to render memorable his personal farewell

MR. ATWOOD CIRCLING THE NEW YORK HERALD DESPATCH BOAT OWLET.

After a series of spectacular and nerve testing flights, in which he volplaned almost to the surface of the bay at angles that frequently caused thousands lined on the Battery shore of New York, New Jersey and Brooklyn to believe that his machine had collapsed and that he was falling to his doom, Harry N. Atwood circled the Statue of Liberty with a passenger for the first time in history. The feat was accomplished in clever fashion. The aviator showed remarkable daring by soaring above the torch at a height of only five feet. He swept around it in circles, rose and fell, and then shot to Governor's Island, where he made a graceful landing while the thousands of onlookers cheered and the whistles of boats tooted.

THE DUTY OF TEACHERS.

One of the speakers at the convention of the Catholic Educational association held at Chicago last week was Brother Marcellinus, C. S. C., the principal of the Catholic central high school of this city. He discussed a paper entitled, "Our Children and Their Life Work." He believed that teachers should keep in touch with their scholars after they left school and passed from under their direct control, and continuing he said:

"As teachers we must at all times have at heart the interest and progress of our students. To be great is not common to the many, but to do well we must be good, and that is the heritage of all. The inordinate love of pleasure is the curse of our boys and men today. This spirit usually comes in the time of adolescence, when a boy has or is completing the grammar school course, hence the necessity of the high or secondary school where the training of youth may be continued."

HOLY CROSS PRIESTS.

Annual Retreat is Being Held at University of Notre Dame.

Priests and brothers of the Order of Holy Cross throughout the United States began their annual retreat Tuesday at the University of Notre Dame. They come from all parts of the country. Presidents of colleges and pastors of churches under control of the order will take part in the retreat.

Sessions are presided over by the Very Rev. Andrew Morrissey, C. S. C., provincial of the order in the United States. The retreat is preached by the Very Rev. Alfred Cagney of the Passionist order. He will deliver six sermons every day.

Immediately following the retreat there will be a meeting of the General Council, which will be in session for a week. This council determines whether changes are to be made in the different colleges and churches of the order and also decides on needed improvements.

LUTHERAN MINISTERS.

Increase in the Number of Young Men Entering the Work.

Rev. Martin Luecke, the director of the Concordia college, in speaking of the education of young men for the ministry, said there were fourteen colleges and seminaries in the United States where they receive theological training for the Lutheran faith. Last year there were enrolled a total of 1,795 students, 1,500 of whom were studying for the ministry. This is a gain of 100 over the previous year.

Concordia college in this city is a preparatory school for theological training and many of the students after graduating here take up the study of the ministry. During the year that closed a few weeks ago there were 234 students at the institution. The year commencing in September promises to increase the attendance.

SISTERS ON VACATION.

The Sisters of Providence of St. Augustine's academy and St. Catherine's academy left this morning for their mother house at St. Mary's-of-the-Woods, Vigo county, Indiana, where they will spend their vacation and make their annual retreat.

COUNCIL GIVES APPROVAL.

May Make Some Changes in Plans Before They Are Finally Adopted.

While the city council gave its approval last night to the resolution for the opening of College and Union streets under the tracks of the Pennsylvania company Members Braun and Wagner were not satisfied with a nineteen-foot roadway and a five-foot walk on one side. Chairman Benoy, of the board of public works, stated that changes can be made before final approval and the resolution went through in order that no delays may be incurred.

After an investigation the board of works decided that the signature of Mrs. Helen Dickey, of Leith street, to a petition asking that brick be used for paving that thoroughfare, was not put there by her and decided that the petition asking a change from asphalt did not contain a majority of the names of the resident property owners. W. C. Ryan, attorney for the brick interests, entered formal objection to the ruling.

ITALIAN DENIES RECEIPT OF AID

Said He Had Money With Him When He Fled from City.

Rafello Mastriano denied to the police today that he had received any financial aid from his friends when he fled from Fort Wayne after having fired the shots that killed Paul Yonia, on Melita street, Monday evening, and added that he had money with him at the time he left the city. He was arraigned in the city court today, but was not asked to plead and his case was continued until tomorrow. He said he wanted time to get an attorney.

After leaving Fort Wayne he went a short distance west and doubled back, and then walked along the Pennsylvania tracks to Dixon, where he boarded a train for Pittsburg.

Mastriano will endeavor to prove that he shot Yonia in self-defense. He insists that when Yonia came to his room Yonia had a knife that he flashed and that he (Mastriano) fired to keep from being killed. He also denies that he made any improper advances to the young Italian girl that figured in the story and says that he told Yonia his neighbors referred to him as a "cocoanut head," which is particularly offensive to Italians and also said he would be able to prove that the man he shot had a knife.

Coroner Kesler conducted the examination, but none of the evidence he obtained indicated that Yonia had a knife. The state asked a continuance because several of the witnesses in the case wanted to attend Yonia's funeral. Mastriano was brought back Wednesday evening by Detective Sergeant Pappert.

Mike Davis Not Guilty.

Mike Davis was proven not guilty of taking some money that Robert Hirschberger hid in one of his shoes while he was swimming Wednesday, but it was shown that he is not as much of a fighter out in the open, where no ring rules obtain, as he is in the squared circle.

He is a Syrian and has appeared here under the name of Young Mitchell. He slapped a crippled lad Wednesday and the lad's brother took up the fight and gave the scrapper a good licking.

The Other Cases.

Dan Hunt and Peter Fitzer, two vags who said they want work, were given today to hunt it with instructions to leave town if they were unsuccessful.

John Jernschewitz was given a fine of $1 and costs and a day in jail for roughly handling Anna Huffmann in a neighborhood fight about some grass and chickens.

John Nochon, a Roumanian, was fined $1 and costs for stealing a sofa pillow from the office of Dr. J. E. Canada.

KILLS HUSBAND; SET FREE.

Leadville, Colo., July 6.—Women and sentiment won a victory yesterday when the murder charge against Assunta Capra, an Italian woman who killed her husband here six weeks ago, was dismissed in Judge Cavender's court.

The women of the state had taken an interest in the case to the extent of besieging District Attorney Hogan with requests that the woman not be prosecuted, as they said she was justified in killing her husband. Mrs. Capra is about to become a mother.

CLOWNS ARE A BIG FEATURE

Ringling Brothers' Jesters of World-Wide Reputation.

Fifty of the world's best and merriest clowns are largely responsible for the attractiveness of the program which Ringling Bros.' world's greatest shows are offering this year. There is not a moment during the three hours the doors are open that the audience is not laughing at some droll stunt or funny antic of the great army of comedians.

Most of these gay sky-larkers are from Europe. They are from the comic opera companies of Paris and Berlin, the pantomimes of famous Drury Lane, from the courts of eastern potentates and from our own vaudeville and musical comedy stages. This is the circus that for a quarter of a century has originated the best there is in clowning. It is funnier than ever this year. The man who attends one of its performances and does not come away with a more hopeful focus on life had better see an undertaker.

At all times the arena is the scene of merry action. There are satires on public and political happenings, farces, the richest of vaudeville sketches, dialects acts and clever tom-foolery. The coarseness that characterizes the clowns of other shows is missing. The compound essence of wholesome and innocent fun is ever on tap. The audience drinks large draughts of it with beneficial results to health and mind.

Foremost among the comedians is Al Miaco. He was the original Humpty-Dumpty. Though nearly sixty years old, he is still the leader of all the world's pantomimists and harlequins. His name is that of an illustrious family of comedians. There is also Jules Turnour, the best of all French mimics. Jules is the subject of an intensely interesting biographical story written by Isaac F. Marcosson, the magazine editor and author. He has clowned in every civilized country on earth. Kings and queens, diplomats and professors have laughed at him. He is the delight of the children. George Harizell is another of the clowns. The magazines all over the country have devoted pages to his clever work. Still another is James Spriggs, the clown policeman. He is what is known as a "free lance," working independently of the others. Laughter follows in his train wherever he goes.

Other celebrated fun-makers with this show are John Slater, the Happy Hooligan of the sawdust; Charley Smith, the king of cut-ups; Tom Roberts, best of all Dutch clowns; the Deltorellis, famous Hungarian grotesque; the funny Millvos, Max Heller, Leslie Wysong, and Al White, the best character artist in America.

White's clever stunts come as a surprise to the audience. It is not known that he is a clown until the performance is half over, though he has kept the crowds laughing from the start. The women are the first to spot him. He works among the audience. A clever little boy assists him.

When the big show comes to Fort Wayne on Friday, July 21, it will set the town to laughing as it never laughed before.

Famous Dog Equestrian.

"Toque," a dog that rides a horse and is a remarkable juggler and acrobat, will be seen here with Ringling Bros.' circus. The dog is a somersault rider and his accomplishments have never been duplicated by any other animal of his kind. He is being exhibited by Alfred Loyal, the great English animal trainer.

REMOVING TO CANADA.

David Spindler, former county surveyor, is today removing his family to Windsor, Canada, immediately across the river from Detroit. Mr. Spindler is now employed as civil engineer for a land company operating in Canada.

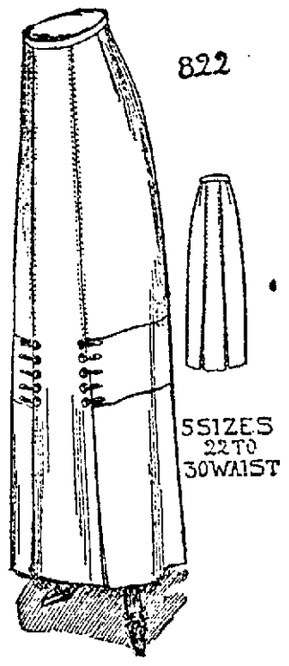
POPULAR SKIRT MODEL.

By MRS. JANE FORD.



There is no part of dress that a woman should be more careful with than her skirt. An ill fitting waist may be disguised with cleverly arranged trimming, but no such art can overcome a badly cut or hung skirt. Therefore it behooves those who are contemplating making a jupe—particularly if it is to be made of tub material—to look carefully to the selection of a pattern, and all those shown in The Sentinel are guaranteed to hang correctly, and not to sag, if the directions given on the pattern label for making are followed.

The drawing pictures a specially attractive model that is suitable for wear with a separate waist or to combine with a waist of the same material to form a costume. The band trimming offers an opportunity to work out the combination of stripes which is a feature of this season's fashions.

To make the skirt in the quickest and easiest way possible baste the gores together, according to the notches in the pattern, and slip the skirt on, right side out. Any adjusting that is necessary over the hips may be arranged by taking up or letting out the goods at seams, and all alterations must be basted before the seams are stitched. Next the placket is arranged, the belt placed and the hem at the lower edge turned.

To copy this skirt requires only four and one-eighth yards of thirty-six-inch goods.

HATS OF THE MOMENT.

An extraordinary variety of shapes in millinery continues to be in vogue, and for trimmings, feathers and wings are most popular. With regard to color, beige will be excessively used on all millinery. A very delightful little hat illustrating this was in a fine white straw of helmet shape, and was trimmed all around with upstanding beige colored wings. Herons' feathers are used a great deal, and have a fine feathery appearance, which is charming. A net little shape in black Tagal was trimmed with a cluster of pale pink Heron's feathers on the right side, with a narrow band of pale pink folded ribbon round the crown. Pink will be a great rival to beige as a predominating color on hats. Wonderful osprey plumes are seen in great quantities on large and small hats alike, while wheat ears in conjunction with flowers are often seen. Flower trimmings continue to stand very erect on the side or front of the hats they adorn. One is glad to see the brims turning up at the back, so that we shall again be credited with possessing a well aranged coiffure, and not be so hopelessly buried in our headgear as in previous years.

With the coming of summer our thoughts turn longingly to summer materials and thin frocks, and it is impossible to consider seriously any others with any degree of interest. The ready made garment is a delight to the woman of small means, as she is at once able to see the general effect of a style, and whether it suits her or not; while the small alteration necessary is generally skillfully enough carried out. The up to date woman is so busy with her various engagements—social, political or domestic—that it is a boon to be able to find tasteful and becoming little frocks at her immediate disposal, without having had the bother and fuss of interviews and "tryin-on" at the dressmaker's, which may be included in the category of things that add years to one's life. Mousseline de soie appears a great deal in our summer dresses, and is often used in conjunction with lingerie and embroidery frocks.

FORMERLY RESIDED HERE.

Mrs. Margaret Brooks, formerly a resident of Fort Wayne, died Sunday at the home of her son, seven miles west of Warren, death resulting from dropsy. Funeral services were held Wednesday morning.

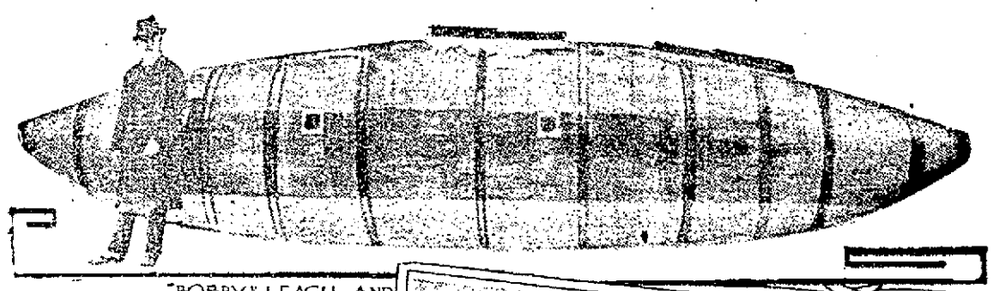
THROUGH NIAGARA'S WHIRLPOOL IN BARREL MAY CAUSE DEATH



"BOBBY" LEACH AND HIS BOAT

"Bobby" Leach Seeks to Shoot the Rapids, Saved by Watchers on Shore.

MANY SEE THE STRUGGLE

In a cigar shaped barrel of his own construction "Bobby" Leach, of Ningara Falls, Ont., attempted to make a trip through the whirlpool and sustained injuries which may result fatally. Starting from the old Maid of the Mist landing, he was tumbled through the rapids, his steel barrel several times being shot clear of the water in the rush to the pool.

The barrel was swept into the middle of the pool and remained there for two hours before it swung close enough to be captured by watchers on the shore.

Several times the barrel was sucked under.

Leach, a man of fifty, was bleeding from a number of wounds.

PACKARD MUSIC HOUSE

Fort Wayne, Indiana

FROM A SPINSTER'S POINT OF VIEW.

When a beautiful woman remains unmarried and smilingly chooses the celibate state, her friends looks on in amazement and the world wonderingly ask, Why? Does she really prefer single blessedness to the joys and jars of domesticity? It is self-evident that she has had plenty of chances to wear the matrimonial shackles, but a steadfast refusal to do so indicates a perfect satisfaction with her present mode of life.

Perhaps the real reason why many fair—and otherwise—women remain "old maids," "bachelor girls," or whatever you prefer to call them, is that they are not so much enamored of independence as that the right man never came along. In each man who proposed they saw some fault which, though slight at the time, would have grown into an unbearable bugbear, they knew, if it were necessary to meet that same fault every day.

Woman's intuition, or the faculty of discerning character almost at a glance, has been the basis of many refusals. Of course there are many girls who do not care to exercise their intuition in the choice of a husband, for if they looked with clairvoyant eyes upon their admirers very few marriages would ever take place.

They close their eyes to the faults and take a chance on making the man over, or of marring their own happiness for the rest of existence.

One woman whose continued state of single blessedness has been an enigma to her friends gives the following explanation of her condition. She says:

"The first proposal I received was from a man who answered to the description of the 'average man.' That is, he was neither pasionately romantic nor absolutely matter of fact. He was not gifted nor was he really stupid. He was the sort who would be perfectly content to travel along in the commonplace route, never aspiring to the heights nor sinking to the depths of feeling and imagination. My intuition told me that if I accepted him I should be doomed to long years of humdrum existence in which he would become more and more set in his ways and more averse to receiving fresh truths, more and more convinced that I should be grateful to him for selecting me to be his wife. Of course I refused this offer.

"The next man who asked me to marry him was the possessor of 'temperament.' I knew the marriage ceremony often changed this fascinating trait into the less fascinating one of temper, and so I refused to become a slave to his artistic gifts.

"Another man wanted to 'mould me,' but as I thought my character was sufficiently well formed already I declined to try the experiment. To a woman of any spirit this 'moulding' process would only have been the name for a perpetual series of discords, or else a married life choked with the smouldering fires of discontent and suppression.

"The man who practiced small economies during his courtship I declined without a regret. Married life with a miser is the most tragic fate of all.

"My friends who are married have often pitied my lonely state and, while I think there is something tragic in having missed the most beautiful thing in life—love—I do not regret my faculty for looking into the future and seeing men not as they are, but as they will be several years hence."

PIUS X. APPROVES TAFT PEACE PLANS

In Open Letter the Pope Endorses Movement to Abolish War.

WRITES TO DELEGATE

Washington, D. C., July 6.—Pope Pius X., in an autograph letter received yesterday by the apostolic delegate to Washington, applauds the lead taken by the United States in the world wide campaign for international peace.

Although the pontiff does not mention President Taft specifically by name, a copy of the letter was forwarded last night to the white house. It is expected the president, because of his well known peace views, will reply to the cordial sentiments of the ruler of the church.

The letter follows:

"To our venerable brother, Diomedes, titular archbishop of Larissa, apostolic delegate to the United States of America:

"Venerable brother: Health and apostolic benediction.

"We are happy to learn from you that in the United States of America under the leadership of men enjoying the highest authority with the people, the more judicious members of the community are fervently desirous of maintaining the advantages of international peace. To compose differences, to restrain the outbreak of hostilities, to prevent the dangers of war, to remove even the anxieties of so-called armed peace is, indeed, most praiseworthy and any effort in this cause, even although it may not immediately or wholly accomplish its purpose, manifests, nevertheless, a zeal which cannot but redound to the credit of its authors and be of benefit to the state.

Vast Armies Portend Wars.

"This is especially [illegible] at the present day, when vast [illegible] nies, instrumentalities most destructive to human life, and the advanced state of military science, portend wars which must be a source of fear even to the most powerful rulers.

"Wherefore we most heartily commend the work already begun, which should be approved by all good men, and especially by us, holding, as we do, the supreme pontificate of the church and representing Him who is both the God and the Prince of Peace, and we most gladly lend the weight of our authority to those who are striving to realize this most beneficient purpose.

"For we do not doubt that the same distinguished men who possess so much ability and such wisdom in affairs of state will construct in behalf of a struggling age a royal road for the nations leading to peace and conciliation in accordance with the laws of justice and charity, which should be sacredly observed by all. For, inasmuch as peace consists in order, who will vainly think that it can be established unless he strives with all the force within him that due respect be everywhere given to those virtues which are the principles of order and its firmest foundation.

Recalls Illustrious Examples.

"As for the remaining aspects of the matter, we recall to mind the example of so many of our illustrious predecessors, who, when the condition of the times permitted, rendered, in this very matter also, the most signal service to the cause of humanity and to the stability of governments.

"But since the present age allows us to aid in this cause only by pious prayers to God, we, therefore, most earnestly pray God, who knows the hearts of men and inclines them as He wills, that He may be gracious to those who are furthering peace amongst the peoples and may grant to the nations which with united purpose are laboring to this end that the destruction of war and its disasters being averted, they may at length find repose in the beauty of peace.

"As a pledge of divine favor and a proof of our benevolence we most lovingly grant you, venerable brother, the apostolic benediction.

"Given at Rome at St. Peter's, the eleventh day of June, 1911, and the eighth year of our pontificate.

"PIUS X."

Inspired by Gibbons Jubilee.

The letter, it is understood, was inspired by the recent jubilee at Baltimore, when Cardinal Gibbons celebrated the fiftieth anniversary of his accession to the church.

On that occasion many of the speakers dwelt enthusiastically on the growth of the peace sentiment, President Taft being among those who lent their hearty indorsement to the sentiments expressed.

CRAWLED OFF TO DIE.

Logansport, Ind., July 6.—Frank Morrie, fifty years old, a junk collector, overcome by the heat on Sunday, crawled into a vacant building on Fifth street. Friends did not know where he had gone. Yesterday another junk collector, entering the building, discovered the body of Morrie in a ghastly state. Five prostrations from heat were reported in the city.

SAGE AND SULPHUR

Made Her Look Twenty Years Younger

COUNTY OF MONROE } ROCHESTER, N. Y.

Nancy A. Herrick, being duly sworn, deposes and says: When I was a girl, I had a head of heavy, long, dark brown hair which was the envy of my schoolmates, and which attracted the attention and remarks of strangers. As I grew older, my hair commenced to come out, just a little at first, but gradually more and more, and then began to turn gray. I was induced by the many good reports I had heard of Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Hair Remedy to try a bottle. My hair was quite thin and gray when I began using Sage and Sulphur, and you can imagine my satisfaction when I found that it was fast coming back to its natural condition, being thicker, darker and more glossy than it had been for a long time. I continued to use Sage and Sulphur, and my hair is now as heavy, dark and smooth as when I was a girl of sixteen. It is now four years since I commenced using Sage and Sulphur, and my hair is still in splendid condition.

FROU-FROUS AND FRILLIES

By J. Elstner Rogers

WH-R-R-R—WH-R—WH-R. One long, two short.

"Bobby's ring!" said Frances, her hand pressing the latch-button. She opened the door of the flat and waited. He had climbed the first flight already; now she could see the brown derby nearing the top of the second—then he looked up and saw her standing in the doorway, silhouetted against the gas-lit background.

"Hello, Bobby!"

"Hello, Frank!" he called cheerily, as he bounded up the remaining steps and caught her hands in a hearty grasp. When he had laid aside his hat and raincoat and she had turned the gas higher he put his hands on her shoulders and whirled her around to face him.

"You are not looking fit. What's the matter?" he asked, his quick eyes noting the thinness of her cheeks and the bigness of the red-brown eyes. Such a slim, youthful thing she seemed in the short, dark skirt and white blouse, open at the neck; the boyish little head with its red-brown curls was set so daintily on the slender throat.

"Oh, the summer, I guess—it's been pretty hot," she answered, with a shrug of her shoulders under his hands. "But you are looking fit." She pushed a big chair toward him.

"What has become of the Other One?" he asked, with a glance at the curtained doorway.

"Oh, she's on her vacation—on a real farm—think of it, Bobby—where there is grass, with no signs up—grass to walk on, and trees and birds—and cows and—you know the things in the country, Bobby—I must have forgotten some of them, they seemed such a lot in her letter. Oh, yes, and new-mown hay—not in a bottle, Bobby, but out in the fields! It sounds good, doesn't it?"

She turned her face up to him—an eager face, with its wide, red mouth and little, tip-tilted nose and frank, boyish eyes that held an unaccustomed wistfulness in their depths.

"I know what's the matter. We've been selfish pigs, going off leaving you here to fight it out all by yourself. And you've gone and got overworked and homesick and thin. It's a shame, little chap!"

He pushed his hands deep into his pockets and looked at her with keen self-reproach. The quick tears sprang to the girl's eyes at his sympathy and solicitude, but she smiled and nodded at him brightly.

"Yes, that's it; it has been lonesome. But it is all right, now that you've come back. The Other One will soon be here and the old jolly times will begin again—and I am fit enough. But it has been hot. Have you had anything to eat?" she asked, turning to the cupboard.

"No, bless you, and I'm as hungry as a bear. Let me forage," he added eagerly, putting her aside. "You might overlook something."

She laughed and shook her head.

"There isn't much. If I had known you were coming——"

"Why, I wrote. Didn't you——" He fumbled in his pockets, and drawing out a bulky letter, handed it to her shamefacedly.

"I didn't mail it, but you see I wrote it."

She took it quickly and laughed.

"Isn't it just like you, Bobby? But I am glad you wrote," she said softly as she put it on the mantel. "I'll read it when you are not here to talk to."

"By Jove, here's the perennial ham-bone! It is always in this degree of dilapidation, isn't it? I believe you get it like that in the beginning."

"There's potato salad—not from the delicatessen, either—it's home-brewed. And there is beer in the refrigerator." She slipped from her perch on the arm of a chair and went into the kitchen. "Here's cheese—and there's some rye bread in the bread-box. You'll have to get it out—my hands are full," she said, coming back with a bottle in each hand.

"This is a jolly spread," Bobby replied, drawing up his chair and beginning his attack on the ham-bone. "And you are a jolly little chum, Frank!" He leaned over and patted her shoulder affectionately.

"We won't wash up to-night, Bobby," she said. "You may be company this time."

"I'll do extra next time," he replied, strolling over to the mantel and taking a pipe from the rack. "It's been a long time since this old fellow and I have had a smoke together," he continued, selecting one carved into the face of a man with a long beard. Then he settled himself comfortably in the big chair, and she sat on a low stool near and rolled a cigarette. At length he spoke, leaning back and blowing rings of smoke in the air.

"Frank, I've something to tell you. I haven't told anyone. I wanted you to be the first."

She leaned over and flicked the ash from her cigarette.

"I know what it is," she answered, striking a match and relighting the smoking cigarette. "You—are—in—love," she said between puffs. He sat up suddenly.

"Why, how on earth did you know?" She laughed and rocked back and forth with her hands clasped about her knee.

"Oh, Bobby—your letters! It wasn't even between the lines. It was emblazoned all over them in illuminated script. Oh, Bobby, Bobby, and you thought you had a secret to tell me! She shook her curly head at him and laughed, with her cigarette between her small, white teeth. He grinned.

"What is she like?" she asked after a moment.

"Like?"—he echoed. "Everything sweet and good. She is tall and fair—

"My love has golden hair,
And eyes so blue, and heart so true.
That none with her compare!

"That's the picture!" he said. "And she has the softest, whitest hands." She glanced down quickly at the hard little hands on her knees, with the yellow stain on the fingers. As she bent over to flick the ash again, she dropped the cigarette on the hearth.

"And the tiniest, daintiest foot," he went on, blowing smoke-rings and seeing visions. She drew her rough little boot under her skirt.

"And she wears the prettiest gowns. I had forgotten that there were such gowns—all frou-frous and frillies, you know," he appealed, helplessly struggling with unaccustomed description. The curly head nodded.

"Yes, I know—frou-frous and frillies," she answered, her eyes fixed on the rough gray skirt with its uncompromising lines.

"I want you to see her. She is coming to New York, and she wants to know you. You may be sure that I have told her about you. It was a great joke." He laughed at the recollection. "I talked of 'Frank,' you know, and the jolly larks we had together, and how you nursed me the time I was so ill, and what a good fellow you were—and she said she felt that she knew you, and wanted to thank you for taking care of me for her—but she called you 'him'! Wasn't that great?"

He laughed again, and when she did not join him he leaned over and put his hand on her shoulder.

"Don't you think it's immense?" She pulled herself together.

"Yes—oh, yes, it was a great joke—it is awfully funny! She must have been surprised when you told her I was a—woman."

"But that's the biggest part of the joke—don't you see? I did not tell her." She started and frowned.

"Oh, I see—she is not to know until she sees me."

"That's it. And won't she be surprised! He laughed and leaned back contentedly.

"Yes, she will be surprised. When is she coming?"

"Next week. I'll take you to call. I want you to be friends—my sweetheart and my best chum. But I can't fancy her here—at one of our jolly spreads, for instance. She doesn't seem to belong here, somehow," he blundered on, man-fashion.

Her eyes followed his in a survey of the room, with the foils and mask hanging on the wall opposite, the rifle and leggings piled behind the door, the banjo leaning against the big couch. There was a rack above, filled with steins. A tobacco-jar and several packages of cigarette-papers were on the mantel, and just beneath hung a pipe-rack filled with Bobby's pipes. Then her eyes came back to the empty beer-bottles that were standing on the table. She stood up suddenly and braced herself against the mantelpiece.

"No," she said slowly, as she rolled and lighted a cigarette—"no, she wouldn't belong—naturally I can see that, of course."

He looked up quickly and hurried into brutal apology.

"It isn't that she is prudish or—or that sort of thing. You see, she is just different. She is thoroughly feminine—dainty, dependent, and womanly to her finger-tips. Well, I mustn't sit here all night singing my lady's praises—but I knew you would be interested. I can't talk about her to anybody else as I can to you and it's an immense relief—you understand?"

"Oh, yes, I understand, and I am awfully interested," she said with exaggerated enthusiasm.

"Well, good night, little chap. I'll call for you on Monday evening;" and Bobby turned to go.

"Good night, Bobby," she replied a little wearily.

She stood there motionless until the street door closed, fighting with clenched hands and shoulders squared the weakness that threatened, biting back the tears that choked.

"It isn't a woman's love that counts; it's—it's just the frou-frous and frillies!" she cried, and flung herself down on the couch, with her curly head buried in the pillows.

The hour of bitterness that is inevitable in a woman's life had come.

II

WH-R-R-R—WH-R—WH-R!

Frances pushed the latch-button, unlocked the hall-door, and vanished into the other room as she heard him coming up the last flight.

"Hello! Where are you, Frank?" he called gaily.

"Coming, Bobby!"

There was a swishing, rustling, silken sound, the curtain parted, and she appeared. He stood perfectly still and looked at her. Her white lace gown over its sheath of blue clung to her dainty, rounded figure, until it flared and rippled around her feet over billows and billows of laces and chiffon. A big white hat with nodding plumes was tied over the red-brown curls with a ravishing knot of tulle under one tiny ear. Long white gloves covered the shapely hands and arms that, uplifted, held poised about her shoulders a wrap of pale-blue brocade, half smothered in frills of softest lace.

"Well?" she smiled up at him. He started and drew a long breath.

"You quite took my breath away. I was not prepared for this sort of thing," he answered unsmilingly. The brightness died in her face.

"Oh! You don't like it? You don't think I look—nice?" she said wistfully. He whistled softly.

"Nice!" he said, frowning, and drawing his gloves back and forth through his hand. "Where did you get those things? You did not buy them just to——"

"Just to masquerade in? Oh, dear, no! How much a column do you think they are paying for news, Bobby? My friend on the first floor is an actress—these are hers. I told her I wanted the frilliest ones."

He stared at her. How marvelously they suited her—the plumes and the silks and the laces! A vague regret stirred in him, and suddenly he knew that he could not take her like that to see Marguerite Stanton.

"Something is wrong with me," she said. "Am I too—is the gown too——" she faltered.

"Oh, you—that is, the gown is all right—but—oh, don't you see it will make you—and—and our friendship all—all wrong, for her to see you like that?" he explained miserably, under the growing wonder and hurt in the big brown eyes. "Can't you see that as a chum, a comrade, a bachelor girl, our relations are plausible—there could be no resentment at the trick I have played her, she could feel no jealousy of you? But in those things you are in her class, as it were—and our friendship would take on another aspect. Those clothes and the things I have told her about you don't fit at all."

"I see—I see," she said slowly, discovering in his eyes for the first time the look of the man for the woman.

"So it's the clothes that make the man, after all, isn't it?" she went on, with a little laugh that hurt him strangely. "And the frillies that make the woman. I look too much the part. I am too—too womanly."

"And too sweet. Good Lord, how sweet!" he said to himself; but aloud he replied, "Yes, that's it," dully, and then a sudden anger, a fierce passion of protest, rose within him. He felt baffled, tricked.

"Oh, what a miserable farce—a miserable masquerade! What made you do it? You have spoiled everything—for it can never be the same again!"

"No," she said, "it can never be the same again."

"You've cheated me. You've taken my old playfellow away from me—you've robbed me of my little chum. I've been cheated——"

She lifted her head and looked at him.

"And I," she said.

"You?" he questioned. "Of what?"

"Of my birthright," she answered steadily.

SPENCER PASSES CENTURY RECORD

Has More Than 100 Hits to His Credit in Half the Games.

HAS GREAT CHANCE

Unless he takes a fearful slump or is forced out of the game for some length of time by sickness or injuries, Right Fielder Ray Spencer of the Vets is going to break all Central league record for the number of hits in one season this year, says Tom Swope in the Dayton Herald. Spencer went into Tuesday morning's game at Fort Wayne with 96 hits to his credit. He made a triple, a double and a single in the morning engagement and in the afternoon collected a double and three singles. He now has 103 bingles to his credit and the season is just half over.

What Spencer's wonderful batting really means can be best appreciated by comparing it with the best performances of the leading sluggers who have graced the Central in seasons gone by. In 1907 Champ Osteen of the Springfield club set the high mark in hits with 170 bingles in 128 games. He led the league in hitting with an average of .338. In 1908 Charley French of Evansville made 170 hits in 140 contests and was second among the batters with a percentage of .333. The following year, Arista DeHaven, the Vets' left fielder then with Terre Haute, made the greatest number of hits ever recorded in a single season by a Central league batter. DeHaven piled up 173 singles, doubles, triples and homers and led the league with a mark of .336. He played 139 games. Last season Del Young of Fort Wayne secured the most hits, 166 in 140 games. He did not, however, finish with a high percentage. His average of .303 earned him eighth place among the batters.

If Spencer can make 103 hits in 68 games and can continue smacking them out at that rate he will have secured a total of over 200 bingles when the curtain is rung down on September 10. If he does it will probably be some time before his record is equalled. Spencer made 103 hits in 68 games, while Ty Cobb, the first batter to turn in 100 hits in the big leagues, ran his total up to 101 in his fifty-sixth game. Spencer is not a Cobb but he certainly is the King Bee slugger of the Class B leagues.

Spencer's one hundredth hit started trouble for Jeff Pfeffer Tuesday afternoon that ended in the Vets sewing up the game right in the first inning. Deerfoot came to bat in the opening round with Kirkpatrick and Spencer, who had singled, on the bases. He doubled down the right field foul line, scoring both of them. It was the right kind of a wallop for a fellow to celebrate reaching the century mark with.

WILL RAISE CENTRAL PENNANT.

Evansville to Be Attraction at South Bend on Sunday.

South Bend, Ind., July 6.—The raising of the Central league pennant at the South Bend Central league park will take place next Sunday with Evansville as the attraction. The exercises will be in charge of the Rooters' club. Early in the afternoon the rooters will parade the streets. The pennant is the only one won by the Central league in nine years. Eddie Wheeler, who managed the pennant winners, will be present and assist in the exercises.

WOLGAST CLEANS UP A BIG PURSE

He and Tom Jones Get More Than $20,000 Out of Fight.

MORAN TO GO HOME

San Francisco, July 6.—Ad Wolgast and Manager Tom Jones cleaned up handsomely on the bout with Owen Moran, July 4. The victor's end was $12,500 net, including $500 expense money allowed. In addition Wolgast and Jones won between them $6,705 betting on the bout. Also Jones bet $200 Wolgast would stop the Britisher before the match was over. Eight thousand five hundred people were present and the receipts were $32,045.

It's up to Freddie Welsh whether the proposed Wolgast-Welsh match for the lightweight championship of the world takes place in September. Tom Jones deposited $9,000 today, making good the champion's end of a $10,000 side bet for which Wolgast already had $1,000 on deposit. This money will remain up until tonight. If the money is covered Wolgast will go into the mountains to recuperate. If the coin is not covered Wolgast will drop the Welshman.

Manager Jones said today that he didn't believe Welsh wanted to meet Wolgast, but if his side bet was covered and the promoters didn't care to handle the affair he was ready to pull it off with only newspaper men present. He thought Wolgast could earn $10,000 more easily.

As to a fight between Wolgast and Packey McFarland, Manager Jones says McFarland nor any other lightweight outside of Welsh can get a match before November.

"We will let McFarland come in the ring weighing 133 three hours before the match," he said. "That is the best we will do. I don't know whether McFarland can make that weight, but he has done so much hollering we are willing to give him a reasonable chance."

Wolgast left last night for Los Angeles, but will return here by the 19th and start for Michigan. Moran and Charlie Harvey will leave tomorrow for New York. From there Moran will sail for England.

Harvey will take a set of the moving pictures with him. It was not a bright day, but the pictures came out clearly. Harvey says Moran was trained too fine and therefore didn't have strength to wrestle with Wolgast.

WANT A WHITE HOPE.

New York, July 6.—Another effort to pick a "white hope" will be made by the Sporting Club of America on August 1. The club announced today that this second elimination tournament was open to any one who weighed more than 190 and stood six feet tall. The successful man will meet Al Palser Paber, winner of the former tournament.

MUST PUT UP OR SHUT UP

FREDDY WELCH

Wolgast will meet him but wants him to put up $10,000 as a side bet. The Champ's money is up.

RECALLED SMITH IN TIGHT PINCH

Proves He is Some Pitcher and Hitting Helps the Tot Club.

THE CENTRAL GAMES

"Whoinell's Smith?" somebody asked of Eddie Wheeler the last game of the last series Terre Taute played here as a lanky youth with a brand of hair colored between an Italian sunset and new wheat straw strode out to take the center field job.

That stride was something worth looking at. It looked as if it might have been cultivated in the pastoral pastime of looking straight between two farm horses, guiding the destinies of a double-shovel plow and avoiding the young corn without looking at his feet.

"Oh, I've had him planted over here in Kewanee," was the reply. In the course of the matinee this Smith picked off a couple of hits and took good care of the only fly ball that was pounded into his territory. Smith stuck and it developed that he is a pitcher who had been farmed. Wheeler evidently made a mistake as the lanky hurler has been winning his games right along and yesterday he bestowed upon Fort Wayne a most welcome kindness when he held Ed Smith's cohorts in check while the Casey crowd was trimming Wheeling.

Six hits were all he allowed the Benders and they netted just one run. He passed two men and struck out one and was never in any danger as the champs didn't score until the eighth. Kelly, Kroy, Meyers and Holmes came near not getting into South Bend in time for the game. Tuesday night they got out of their sleeper at Columbus to view the scenery and hunt an oasis and they were left behind as the quartet overlooked the fact the trains leave on scheduled time if it is possible. Secretary Robinson, of the Wheeling club, supplied them with money to get here on.

Jack Compton had a sizzling battle at Dayton with "Lefty" Rogers, of the Zanesville troupe. If the Potter hurler had had good support he would not have been beaten but an error in the eighth followed by two of the five hits that Dayton got scored the only run of the matinee.

At Newark Art Quiesser got into the game behind the bat for the new league members and he picked off three hits, one of which was a double. These bingles went toward the defeat of Aggie Grant and his Eva band. Sterzer allowed four hits in one inning and three runs resulted. The scores:

COULDN'T HOLD HIS OWN.

FRANK CHANCE

This great pitcher was batted out of the box by New York in less than five innings and the Athletics lost first place.

FRIEND SLIPS A TIP TO MANAGER

Newspaper Man Told Monty He Could Get World Beater for Song.

MONTY AFTER HIM

"Would you think a guy would do that to a fellow? A newspaper friend of mine tipped this youngster off to me and told me he had a world beater for me and I could get him for nothing. I fell for his stuff and watch me dent his slats the next time I see him."

Manager Roy Montgomery worked this out of his system as he watched Young Quinlan stick out a mitt at Bill Clancey's wicked slash in the third inning of the opening combat with the Stogies and then chase the ball to the fence because he had failed to plant his anatomy squarely in front of it instead of a feeble effort to intercept its mad flight with one hand.

Quinlan is a youth with slender ankles and budding calves who worked some sort of a spell on Manager Clark Griffith, of the Cincinnati team, and kept himself on the Red pay roll until the nation's birthday of the present year. He was cut loose from his mooring at Pittsburg and sent to Montgomery at Wheeling.

He hits at a ball in a different manner, giving the impression that he is afraid of putting a perfectly good dollar and a quarter sphere out of commission. He played short one day and he was so bad there that he was sent to the outfield. There he did worse and last night Manager Monty selected the most impressive piece from his collection of tinware and adorned the prodigy with it.

Big Jeff Pfeffer, who furnished such glorious amusement for the Dayton sluggers in the first inning on the afternoon of the Fourth, was sent back in the initial contest with the Smokes. Luck was with him and he blazed his way through eight of the nine innings in most approved style and his wobble in the other round didn't hurt him much as Mr. Quinlan had presented at least two runs to the home troupe.

The pride of Champaign, Ill., struck out ten men during the matinee and issued two passes. Luck broke in his favor and maybe his old hoodoo is out of commission. He cut loose one wild pitch that gave his opposition a marker in the sixth without the aid of a hit, but he was steady most of the time.

Bill "Whitey" Doak, the prize winner of the Stogie herd, was up for mound duty and he did some good flinging and with good support he could have pulled through with a victory.

In the second inning Young hit to middle and after a couple of failures to move the runner with a bunt Bill Clancy shot a line drive down third baseward that nearly tore Lil Sager's glove off. McLafferty sacrificed and Vandagrift popped to short and Bill Bailey breezed himself back to the bench without sending over a run.

With Pfeffer gone in the third Blount beat a slow grounder and moved up on Justice's out. Jewell kicked Keener's roller and Young was passed, filling the sacks. Bill Clancy lammed the ball over second on a line and Quinlan's bad fielding let it go for a homer. This netted all of the four runs that Fort Wayne got.

Benny Jewell picked off a single to right in the fourth and Servatius hit up on the right field bank for two bags. Durham scored both men with a single. In the sixth Eddie Justice erred on Sager's drive, the runner moved to third on two outs and scored on a wild pitch.

Notes of the Game.

Lil Sager's good right arm is still there and if he could hit he would never be out of a job in the Central.

Montgomery was out. The ligaments in one of his legs are torn and he is unable to play.

Murray had a bad day. He missed Blount's easy fly in the first and struck out three times during the game. Doak struck out twice.

Blount's speed gave him a hit in the seventh when he beat Doak to first when he went over to get the throw of a grounder to Servatius.

Jack Onslow has asked for a rest. He is going stale and Bill Bailey did the catching. He got the only man who tried to steal on him.

The hot weather has Boss Casey and he laid out and let McLafferty play third. The utility man made a good job of it.

Pfeffer did not allow a hit after the fourth inning. He struck out four of the six men up in the eighth and ninth.

LITTLE BITS OF SPORT CHATTER

Pitcher Frank Beatty was left at home by the Stogies this time as he has a bad arm.

Hank Butcher, who was a batting sensation with the Evansville team, is hitting down next to the pitcher for the New Orleans club.

Ed Smith has won two of the last three games he pitched and both were won away from home. He has had trouble rounding into shape and the duties of a manager weighed heavily on him. Now that his club is going along nicely his individual work is improving.

Ty Cobb, of the Tigers, after hitting safely in 41 consecutive games, had his clouting streak broken Tuesday morning by Pitcher Ed Walsh, of the White Sox, whose cunning spitball proved an enigma to the terrible Tyrus. Cobb's record is a new major league mark and will doubtless stand for years to come, unless Ty himself duplicates or betters his feat.

The greatest number of runs so far as the records go in major league base ball fell to the lot of Chicago, when Cleveland was beaten July 24, 1882, by a score of 35 to 4. Games have been played between professional teams in which scores reached over 100 runs, but these are not in the record books, and have no place in modern-day base ball.

Brooklyn is one of the under dogs in the National league, but Dahlen's boys invariably have something to say as to where the pennant lands. Last season the Superbas put a fatal crusher to a Pirate spurt that was threatening to give Smoketown a second pennant. But for Brooklyn's good work against the Phillies this spring, Doodin's men would now be leading the Giants by several games.

Frank Baker must always be named among the great hitters in the American league. Mack's young third baseman is some pumpkins when it comes to swinging the ash. Baker is a free and consistent hitter. A pitcher may fool him now and then, but there is never a time that he is not dangerous, and especially so when there are men on the bases. When Mack picked up Baker he put the final spike into a championship aggregation.

As long as John I. Taylor owns the Boston Red Sox, John I. Taylor will be their manager. He may not hold the official title, but he is the boss. Taylor travels with the team, calls down the athletes, picks the pitchers, hands out suspensions and engineers all deals. He has picked to pieces the good team that Fred Lake left him. Donovan shoulders the blame and Taylor is looking for a new scapegoat. Jimmy Collins, George Huff, Bob Unglaub, Jim McGuire and Fred Lake could not suit Taylor, and neither can Donovan. Taylor may put in another figurehead, but none of his players wants the job.

The luster of another star in the base ball firmament is fast waning and soon will be totally extinguished. For years this bright luminary twinkled resplendently in the heavens of the major leagues. Even after it had passed into the more remote regions of the minors its brilliance was still visible. Now it is but a flickering light which threatens to die out at any moment. Charles Hickman, "Cheerful Charley," originator of the piano legs in baseball, also globe trotter extraordinary, is in all probability making his final appearance on the diamond as a professional ball tosser this season.

FROM THE BOX SCORES

Alexander McCarthy proved his worth to Pittsburg yesterday when he accepted fourteen chances at second and hit for a home run. His fielding made a new record for Forbes field. Max Carey got two hits and a stolen base in the game.

Ty Cobb made or batted in the first five runs credited to the Detroit team in the game against the White Sox. The victory, with a defeat to Philadelphia, sent the Tigers back to first place.

Dal Gainor was out at practice for the first time with the Detroit team since his arm was broken early in May. He will be in the game in ten days or two weeks.

Walter Johnson held Boston to six hits and poled one for a home run and struck out six men.

Plank, Bender, Krause and Leonard were used by Connie Mack in his efforts to wrest a game from New York and hold the lead, but a batting rally in the ninth gave the Highlanders three runs and a victory.

Thomas was in right field for Philadelphia instead of Runt Walsh, who has not recovered from the effects of a sunstroke on the Fourth of July. The Quakers won the first game and Jack Rowan was knocked off the rubber in the second, while Marquard held Doolin's men to six hits.

Berger, sent to the relief of Doyle in the game against Indianapolis, hit for two doubles that gave Columbus a victory and kept the team in first place.

COULD NOT SLEEP WITH ITCHING RASH

All Over Baby's Body, Head and Face. Scratching Made Sores. Used Cuticura Soap and Ointment and Have Had No Further Trouble.

"On July 27, 1909, we left Boston for a trip to England and Ireland, taking baby with us. After being in Ireland a few days a nasty rash came out all over his body. We took him to a doctor who said it was chicken pox, and gave us medicine for him. The trouble started in the form of a rash and was all over baby's body, head and face, at different times. It irritated, and he would scratch it with all his might. The consequence was it developed into sores, and we were afraid it would leave nasty scars on his face.

"When we reached England we took baby to another doctor, who said his condition was due to change of food and climate, and gave more medicine. The rash got no better, and it used to itch and burn at night so bad that the child could not sleep. He was completely covered with it at different times. It was at this time that my mother advised us to try Cuticura Soap and Ointment. After using Cuticura Soap and Cuticura Ointment for about nine months the places disappeared. There are not any scars, or other kind of disfigurement, and baby is completely cured by the Cuticura Soap and Ointment. We have had no further trouble with baby's skin. Nothing stopped the itching, and allowed baby to sleep but Cuticura Soap and Cuticura Ointment." (Signed) Mrs. Margaret Gunn, 29 Burrell St., Roxbury, Boston, Mass., March 12, 1911.

Cuticura Soap and Ointment are sold throughout the world. Send to Potter Drug & Chem. Corp., Dept. 14A, Boston, for free sample of each with 32-p. book on the skin.

M'KENZIE'S STABLE THE BEST OF ALL

He Has Great Trotters and Pacers for Indianapolis Grand Circuit Meet.

BEGINS ON JULY 11

Indianapolis, July 6.—It looks as if R. J. Mackenzie, the multi-millionaire railroad man of Winnipeg, Manitoba, intends to try to hog the Grand Circuit patch this year, starting with the opening Indianapolis meeting, July 11-14. On the heels of the announcement of his purchase of Penisa Maid, 2:04¼, for $25.000 and three other colts owned by M. D. Shutt, of Rock Rapids, Ia., in Indianapolis this month, comes the announcement of his purchase of the pacer Harry Direct at Memphis, Tenn. It seems that the Mackenzie driver and trainer, Harvis James, slipped away from Indianapolis for Memphis, immediately after the Friday workout and went to Memphis where the green pacer Harry Direct was worked out a mile in 2:05¼ for his benefit. Announcement of the purchase came a little later. Harry Direct is by Walter Direct and he had been the fastest mile of any pacer or trotter in the country up to that time this year. The acquisition of these horses makes the Mackinzie stable loom up in an extremely formidable manner. As Harry Direct is named for the Detroit Chamber of Commerce stake Mr. Mackenzie now has three entries in that classic. The others are Joe Patchen II, 2:17, and the green pacer, Vernon McKinney, which was a mile last year in 2:04¾. Joe Patchen II., is touted as a sure two-minute pacer this year and he looks every inch a champion. Like champion Dan Patch, he is by Joe Patchen. Harry Direct was shipped to Indianapolis immediately and with the other Mackenzie horses will make his first start at the Indianapolis Grand Circuit races July 11-14.

These are only a few of the horses in the Mackenzie barn. Jack Vassar, a bay gelding by Red Medium, is entered in the 2:20 class trot at the coming Indianapolis meeting and he is also a candidate for the M. & M., $10,000 trotting classic at Detroit. The Merry Widow, 2:03¾, is a pacer in the Mackenzie barn that was a big winner on the Grand Circuit last year and she is expected to lower her record this season. Sister Florentine, 2:14¼, is a Mackenzie pacer in the 2:15 class pace; March McEwen, 2:08¼, is a roan gelding in the 2:09 pace; Mary Mac, 2:12¼, is to start in the 2:12 trot; Bert Kelly, 2:34, a bay gelding, is named for the 2:20 class trot, and several other Mackenzie horses will start in the other races.

Mackenzie now has the best looking free-for-all trotter in the country in Penisa Maid and The Merry Widow is one of the best looking sweepstake pacers in sight. The intermediate classes are well filled and altogether it will be well to watch the Mackenzie string.

Both Mr. and Mrs. Mackenzie are enthusiastic over the harness horse and both will see all the Grand Circuit races. They were recently married and their honeymoon down the Grand Circuit will be a happy one and happier if the Mackenzie trotters and pacers come up to expectations.

Dickerson Has Good Record.

Johnny Dickerson is one of the most famous drivers of harness horses the nation has produced. Next to Geers, the records show he has put more horses in the 2:10 list than any other man. He now has a big stable of promising material at the State fair ground for the Indianapolis Grand Circuit meeting July 11-14 and he is expected to finish high in the summaries. Dickerson is a native Hoosier, starting his career in the horse world at Greensburg and going to Terre Haute before he made Indianapolis his headquarters.

Veteran Indiana Driver Again to Cut Big Figure

W. H. (KNAPSACK) M'CARTHY.

This Terre Haute driver, who has done much to put Indiana in the front rank in the harness horse world, has a formidable string at the Indianapolis track, ready for the Indianapolis Grand Circuit races July 11-14. He has two fast free-for-all trotters in Nancy Royce and Oro and he is always a hard man to beat to the wire.

HEIR TO MILLIONS OUTWITS PARENT, WEDS

MR. AND MRS. THOMAS F. MANVILLE, JR.

When Thomas Franklin Manville, president of the so-called asbestos trust, reaches New York on July 8 on board the steamship Amerika, of the Hamburg-America line, after a round trip across the Atlantic Ocean in pursuit of his son, Thomas Franklin Manville, Jr., nineteen years old, he will learn that the youthful heir to the Manville millions has taken advantage of his absence by twice getting married.

Only one bride figures in the elopement, however. She is Miss Florence E. Huber, a beautiful nineteen-year-old girl, whose home is in Williamsport, Pa. The couple were secretly married in New York on June 8 last, and the second wedding, which will take place in Baltimore, is for the purpose of thwarting any efforts on the part of Papa Huber to annul the marriage on the ground that his daughter is not of age.

The Song Sparrow.

The song sparrow is one of the birds that build their nests on the ground. Do you know him—a little bird, gray and brown streaked above and a white breast covered with brown spots and stripes? Have you seen him sitting on a fence or bush and heard his rollicking song? The song sparrow is common all over the United States. From Maine to California and from Oregon to Florida he sings happily six months out of the year. A regular scout, he sneaks along the side of a stream and appears at a distance like magic. He is equally skillful in hiding his nest. Completely covered by a tuft of grass, we would almost step on it before we found it. We may truly wonder how the song sparrow can find it himself, but perhaps his eyes are brighter than ours. The four or five eggs are small and heavily spotted with brown, so that they, too, are hard to see.

Blab Schools.

Within the last half century "blab schools" were to be found in various parts of Kentucky. In these schools the children not only recited but learned their lessons in concert. As they did not all study the same lessons at the same time, the hubbub was startling to one unaccustomed to this sort of work. It would seem that under these conditions an indolent pupil might scamp his work very easily, but the master's ears were so keen that he immediately knew if any one dropped out or if a mischievous urchin undertook to convey a private message under cover of the noise. A sharp tap of the birch brought the culprit to bay at once.

Cock of the Rock.

In Guiana and other northeastern parts of South America lives a beautiful but lonely bird called the cock of the rock. It has bright orange colored plumage, the quill feathers of the wing are black, and the tail is tipped with yellow. Its large crest overhangs its bill. The tips of the crest feathers are tinged with brown and yellow. It is a solitary bird, living in rocky places. It hides by day and comes forth to feed at sunrise and sunset. Its size is about that of the common pigeon

Five Geese In a Flock.

When your friends come to see you, play five geese in a flock. The children sit on the grass or on a bank or bench side by side. One stands as market woman opposite the row of players.

She walks along the row and touches each child, beginning where she pleases and saying one word of the following rhyme to each as she touches her:

Please—feed—farmer—cut—the—corn;
Keep—the—wheat—and—burn—the—thorn;
Shut—your—gate—and—turn—the—lock;
Keep—the—five—geese—in—a—flock.

As soon as she says the word "flock" the one first touched jumps up and runs away. The market woman pursues her. M. A. SARBER IS INSTANTLY KILLED

Is Struck by G. R. & I. Passenger Engine at Lagrange.

NO WITNESSES TO THE ACCIDENT

Fellow Trainmen Find Body After a Short Search for It.

Murle Allen Sarber, a brakeman in the employ of the Grand Rapids and Indiana company, was struck and instantly killed by the engine pulling southbound passenger train No. 20 in Lagrange at 12:20 o'clock this morning. There were no witnesses to the accident and Engineer I. Clemm, who was at the throttle of the passenger engine, did not know of it until he reached Fort Wayne.

Brakeman Sarber was a member of Conductor O. A. Phipps' crew, which left the city on northbound freight train No. 51 at 6:30 o'clock last night. They were delayed somewhat en route and received instructions to stop on a siding at Lagrange until the passenger train had passed. No. 51 reached the siding about an hour before the passenger train was due and laid there until it passed. The last time one of the members of the crew saw Brakeman Sarber alive he was standing at the telephone booth at the end of the siding, lantern in hand. Soon after the passenger train had passed, Conductor Phipps, who had missed him, instituted a search and found Sarber's body about five car lengths from the place he was seen alive some minutes before. Life was extinct and the coroner was called and the remains turned over to him and later sent to Fort Wayne on the noon train, where they were received by Undertakers Getz & Cahill and are being prepared for burial. The body was not badly mangled.

M. A. Sarber was the son of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas J. Sarber, of 1420 East Creighton avenue. He was born in

BRAKEMAN M. A. SARBER,
Who Lost His Life at Lagrange Wednesday Night.

Fort Wayne December 30, 1883, and was upwards of 27 years old. May 23, 1907, Mr. Sarber was married to Miss Arilla Haudeschild, who, with two sons, one three years old and the other three months old, survive him. The father is a conductor on the Pennsylvania road and he and the bereaved mother survive the son.

Brakeman Sarber was well known and universally liked in the city. He became a brakeman on the G. R. & I. August 10, 1910, and was considered one of the best of the new trainmen. Previous to taking employment on the road the young man was employed in the tank department of the Pennsylvania shops four years, his foreman being J. Wise, who also speaks in words of praise for him. He was a member of the First Baptist church, of the Brotherhood of Railway Trainmen and of the Pennsylvania Relief department. Until recently he was a member of Company D, Third infantry, Indiana National Guard, serving during his entire term of enlistment as a bugler. He enlisted under Captain J. L. Birely, but served the greater portion of his term under Captain Clyde F. Driesbach.

When in the employ of the Pennsylvania young Sarber took quite an active part in the athletic association and was especially active in the arrangements for the annual field day. He was quite an athlete himself, but took no part in the various contests at the last meeting, except in the capacity of committeeman.

The remains will probably be taken to the late home of the deceased on Hayden street tomorrow morning, but the arrangements for the funeral have not been made. It will be under the auspices of Fort Wayne lodge, No. 136, Brotherhood of Railway Trainmen.

part of the discussion will be devoted to a technical treatment of the general subject of high tension.

The Fort Wayne section, which will be the immediate host, representing the American Institute in the entertainment of the delegates, has abandoned its regular monthly meetings during the summer months, but will continue them in September, at which time the committees then appointed will actively commence preparations for the November convention.

WILL SPEND $30,000,000.

Canadian Northern Plans Big Improvement for Year.

In the way of railway construction during the summer of 1911 the Canadian Northern will take the lead if its plans are carried out. In his report on railway construction in Canada, Consul General John E. Jones, who is stationed at Winnipeg, says:

"It is reported that the Canadian Northern railway during the coming summer will spend approximately $30,000,000 in improving existing lines and in the construction of new road beds.

"On one contract alone there are 4,600 horses and mules at work. The line referred to is the road which the company is constructing to the great coal fields in the country traversed by the Brazeau river in the foothills of the Rocky mountains. The line by which the Canadian Northern expects to reach these great deposits is a branch from the line under construction from Vegreville to Calgary. The company fully expects that this important branch will be completed to the coal fields by November, and the coal will be used in the locomotives and the stations of the company the coming winter.

"It has also been announced that the grading of the line into Athabasca Landing has been completed, and the building commenced of the grade east from the landing in the direction of North Battleford.

"On the line between Edmonton and Vancouver work is being pushed with energy from both ends. The first Canadian Northern Pacific locomotive was delivered in New Westminister on June 12 and will be used on the line east from that city. Grading the line from Port Mann, the Pacific coast terminus of the road, to Sturgis is complete, and the rails will be laid as far as Hope, quite a distance up the Fraser, by mid-July.

"It is reported that an important use would probably be made of the line which the company has under construction from Rossburn Junction west through Russell in this province. Thousands of cars of ballast are to be distributed on this line this summer, and it is expected that it will be completed at an early date to join the main line. When this is done and when the Vegreville branch is built into Calgary a through service will probably be given between Winnipeg and Calgary, using the new road through."

MOVING WABASH DEPOT.

Temporary Structure at Broadway Goes to Missouri.

John Danes, foreman of Wabash carpenters, has a gang of men at work taking down the building on Broadway which served over a year as a passenger station for the company while track elevation was in progress at Calhoun street. The building is being taken down in sections and it will be taken to Greentop, Mo., and erected and used as a passenger station on the Middle division of the Wabash system.

These will be connected with the Pennsylvania's telephone system and through it with the Home and Bell city lines. The work will be completed in a few days.

MIRDITES AND THEIR WARFARE METHODS.

ALBANIANS READY FOR TURKS — FROM THE ILLUSTRATED LONDON NEWS

The Mirdites form one of the largest tribes in Central Albania. They inhabit a mountain fastness of immense gorges and plateaus. Their capital is Croya, which is built on a rock. Until thirty years ago the only means of access to it were rope and basket.

In fighting the Turks they gather great stones high up on the sides of the passes and at the critical moment cut the rope, letting the rocks fall upon the enemy.

Pollyooly and the Lump

By Edgar Jepson

COPYRIGHT, 1910, BY THE PEARSON PUBLISHING CO.

"Wealth—wealth beyond the dreams of avarice," said the Honorable John Ruffin. "You can do as you like, Miss Bride."

"Thank you, sir," said Pollyooly, with shining eyes.

"But I observe that Mr. Vance calls you Pollyooly. We cannot have that kind of thing. These artists are presumptuous fellows, Miss Bride. You must insist on being treated respectfully; the dignity of your position as my housekeeper demands it."

"Yes, sir," said Pollyooly.

"Understand, then, Vance, that to you Pollyooly is Miss Bride. In my unbending moments I may call her Pollyooly, but you, never. The artist must keep his place," said the Honorable John Ruffin, with an air of splendid hauteur.

"You swells! The airs you give yourselves!" growled the artist.

"I am one of the sixty thousand living Britons with Plantagenet blood in my veins," said the Honorable John Ruffin.

At two o'clock the next afternoon, Pollyooly was at the Temple Station, and took a half return ticket for herself and no ticket at all for the Lump, since her frugal mind impelled her to reckon herself under eleven and the Lump under three, for the purpose of travelling by rail.

Mr. Hilary Vance welcomed her with enthusiasm to a lofty studio of which the chief furniture was a line of canvases, three and four deep, with their faces turned to the wall. Pollyooly was soon posed on a chair on a little dais; the artist fell to work; and the Lump, deserting the toys which Pollyooly had brought for him, proceeded on a tour of examination around this new and spacious chamber. He soon discovered that on the other side of the canvases were bright colors, and turned several of them over. Unfortunately each, like the floor and everything else in the studio, was covered with a thick layer of black dust; and as she saw him grow grimier and grimier, an expression of acute anguish deepened and deepened on Pollyooly's face.

At last Mr. Hilary Vance perceived it, and said, "What's the matter, Pollyooly? Why are you unhappy?"

"Oh, sir, it is so dirty," said Pollyooly.

"What is so dirty?" said Mr. Hilary Vance, surprised.

"Everything," said Pollyooly.

"No: thick for me, please," said the Esmeralda quickly. "I've been in South America for months; and there is no bread-and-butter in South America, so I can't get it too thick."

"Good heavens!" said the Honorable John Ruffin. "Do not tell me that there is no grilled bacon there either."

"There certainly isn't," said the Esmeralda.

"What a country!" said the Honorable John Ruffin.

"Oh, it is!" said the Esmeralda with conviction.

Pollyooly went to make some fresh tea. When she returned, the Esmeralda was saying with her eager animation, "No, no: the men are worse. The food and the insects were bad enough; but the men were worse—perfectly detestable—horrors."

"How very unfortunate!" said the Honorable John Ruffin in a tone of profound commiseration. "And I was under the impression that they were charming—full of fire and passion and Southern romance."

"I shouldn't wonder if it was that that made them so detestable," said the Esmeralda thoughtfully. "It was a perfect persecution."

"I cannot greatly wonder at it," said the Honorable John Ruffin, looking at her with some earnestness.

The Esmeralda smiled at him, and turned to the question of Pollyooly. The rehearsals were in the morning; and it was arranged that Pollyooly should take the Lump with her to them. But that during the performance in the evening he should be left in charge of Mrs. Brown, the policeman's wife, who lived in Pollyooly's old lodgings.

These details settled, the Esmeralda took her departure; and the Honorable John Ruffin accompanied her to her motor brougham. On his return he said to Pollyooly, who was clearing away the tea: "It's amazing how everybody seems to want you, Pollyooly. No sooner did Vance see you dancing than he wanted to draw you; and no sooner did the Esmeralda see you drawn than she wanted you to dance. Yet not one of them has grasped the great, essential fact of your nature, that you grill bacon better than anyone in England."

"Yes, sir," said Pollyooly.

At half-past eleven next morning Pollyooly and the Lump came to Esmeralda's flat in the Savoy Hotel. She welcomed them with hugs and kisses; and then drove them to the Varolium in her motor brougham. Poolyooly held the Lump very tight as they went through the long passages of the great building; and she held him tighter still when they came on to the big stage.

A whirling week followed. There were rehearsals every morning, rehearsals during which the Esmeralda bullied or cajoled the band to the highest pitch of excellence; there were visits to the costumer where Pollyooly was decked out in the most beautiful fairy robes. There were lunches at wonderful restaurants where she and the Lump ate strange and delicious food.

The Esmeralda had been right in her choice of Pollyooly: she learned to do all that was required of her in three rehearsals. She had but little dancing to do: she was little more than a decoration, a charming foil to the Esmeralda's dark beauty. On the night of the first performance Pollyooly was much the less nervous of the two, for she hardly gave a thought to the audience: she was only intent on doing her part properly; and she did her simple business as well as it could be done. She only became really aware of the audience when she stood hand in hand with the Esmeralda, bowing to the storm of applause.

The Esmeralda was a prodigious success; and Pollyooly found her pound a week assured for many weeks. At first the Esmeralda was very careful to drive Pollyooly back to the Temple immediately after the performance. Then she fell into the way of taking her with her to supper. Sometimes one of her admirers had pressed her for an introduction to Pollyooly; sometimes she did not care to sup alone with one of them; and she would say to Pollyooly, "I want you to come and play little red gooseberry tonight."

At these suppers Pollyooly became acquainted with some of the most ornamental members of the British peerage, men whose ancestors had fought at Agincourt and Flodden or brewed beer for nearly two generations. She was too young to appreciate her great privilege; and she very much preferred the suppers at which the Honorable John Ruffin (between whom and a Peerage stood as many as nine lives; or, as he himself preferred to express it, a cat) was host, because there was so much more laughter at them.

There are reasons for believing that the Esmeralda preferred them too: if not, why was he her most frequent host? And why did her eyes shine so much more brightly and her smiles follow one another so much more quickly when she supped with him? Moreover, it was after a talk with Pollyooly about the cold resolution with which he combatted his creditors that the Esmeralda proclaimed it her fancy to sup in a little café in Soho rather than in the shinier and more expensive restaurants in Piccadilly, and made this their practice.

But one evening he met them at the stage-door of the Varolium, and said, "To-day is my birthday; and to-night we sup at Prince's."

"The Café Grice is very nice, and so cosy," the Esmeralda protested.

"Yes, yes; but a man's birthday fancies are sacred. Nothing must stand in the way of following them. Besides, to-day I had an exceedingly agreeable meeting with my cousin, the Duke of Osterly, a friend of Pollyooly's, to whom indeed he quite unconsciously stood in loco parentis for a while. At least it was a very agreeable meeting for me, though he went away from it in a state of entirely unreasonable depression considering his income. And now my pocket is a positive volcano; there is that in it which burns—burns." And he slapped it with the grand air.

"You've touched a Duke? How very splendid!" cried the Esmeralda. "But if it's your birthday, it's my supper. I shall be hostess, so there!"

The three of them got into her motor brougham, and all the way to Prince's he and she wrangled amiably about who should be host. The Esmeralda prevailed, and she ordered the supper in a generous, broad-minded fashion, displaying an accurate knowledge of the Honorable John Ruffin's tastes, which seemed to show that she had paid no little attention to them.

The supper was proceeding joyously, when in the middle of it there came to the next table a tall, barrel-shaped young man with an unspeakably terrifying moustache. So fierce and big and bristly was it that at first it absorbed all the attention of the tremulous beholder. Only when his natural panic had abated could he observe that the young man had cheeks uncommonly like little yellow cushions, thick lips of a scarcely agreeable purplish red, and little black eyes of the best boot-button type. His short-cropped black hair looked a more excellent clothes-brush than ever came out of a factory.

The Esmeralda acknowledged his profound and elaborate bow with the slightest inclination, and a faint look of dismay swept across her face. Pollyooly looked at him at length with fascinated, half-frightened eyes. The Honorable John Ruffin gave him half a glance and went on talking.

Presently the Honorable John Ruffin said, "The yellow gentleman from foreign parts, who keeps staring at you as if he were quite fresh from his simple village is worrying you. Shall I beg him to confine his sparkling glances to the waiters?"

"No, no!" said the Esmeralda quickly. "Leave him alone. He's a very dangerous man. He's Diego Perez, the son of a famous Bolivian brigand—and they call him the Prince of Montevideo."

"He looks more like a yellow dog," said the Honorable John Ruffin in a dispassionate tone, surveying him coldly.

The South American twisted his fierce moustache, scowled at the Honorable John Ruffin, and again turned his gaze on the Esmeralda.

"He was an awful nuisance out there," she said, frowning. "He must have been dreadfully spoilt when he was young."

"He'll get dreadfully spoilt now that he's old, if he goes on staring like that," said the Honorable John Ruffin grimly. "Though it would need painstaking work to spoil a face like that."

"Oh, no, no! You must leave him alone! You must, really!" said the Esmeralda. "He's really very dangerous. The people out there were terrified of him. They said he would stick at nothing."

"A chip of the old brigand block, eh?" said the Honorable John Ruffin calmly. "But we must remember that the terror of Montevideo is the lamb of Piccadilly."

"But he carries weapons—a revolver. They all do," said the Esmeralda.

"Nature gave me all the weapons I need for dealing with South American princes," said the Honorable John Ruffin calmly. "But after all we're not yellow-dog fanciers. Let us talk about more interesting things—the art of grilling bacon now."

Pollyooly did not understand their talk very clearly, but she gathered that her friends did not like the big yellow gentleman with the splendid sparkling diamond in his shirt-front; and, loyally, she took a strong dislike to him herself. The next time his eyes fell on her, observing that her companions were absorbed in one another, she made a most hideous face at him. He started, drew himself upright in his chair, and scowled at her. Pollyooly did not abate her hideous grimace, and with an air of dignity he withdrew his eyes from her. But, owing to defective training in his youth, his was such an unbalanced nature that he could not keep them off her; and she enjoyed the rest of that supper very much. Whenever the yellow prince's boot-button eyes strayed to their table, she was ready for him with some fresh grimace, suggested by a truly fertile fancy. He was bitterly annoyed to find himself no longer able to impress the Esmeralda with the fiery glances of passion; he felt that the need to see what new distortion her angel face Pollyooly had ready for him weakened his power of concentrating himself in a burning gaze, and so impaired its intensity. At the end of twenty minutes of it he gave it up, rose with a jerk from his chair, and strode out of the restaurant in a petulant fury.

"I congratulate you, Pollyooly—a very valuable accomplishment," said the Honorable John Ruffin, smiling.

"What has she been doing?" said the Esmeralda, smiling at her.

"Pollyooly has routed your yellow pet," said the Honorable John Ruffin.

"How clever of you! However did you do it?" cried the Esmeralda.

"By the intensity of her forbidding gaze," said the Honorable John Ruffin.

It soon grew plain that Diego Perez had come to England in pursuit of the Esmeralda; and he became her yellow shadow. He took up his abode at the Savoy; and she hardly ever came out of her rooms without finding him, bowing and smiling with a conquering air, somewhere on her path to the street. He was always at the stage-door to greet her as she came out after her performance. Did she lunch or dine at a restaurant, he sat gazing at her in his passionate way. Every day he sent her flowers, to her rooms and to the theater; sometimes there was a bracelet or a ring with the flowers; always there was a note, ill-spelled perhaps, but very passionate. Sometimes among the passion was an invitation to lunch or dinner; sometimes an invitation to accompany the adoring writer to a warmer climate and dwell in a palace. Every time he got a word with the Esmeralda he preferred this petition orally, sometimes producing from his breast-pocket a special marriage license he had procured against her succumbing to his yellow charm.

The Esmeralda was as an icicle to him. She returned his flowers, his jewelry, and his notes. She broke away from him in the middle of his passionate protestations. At restaurants she never gave him a glance. But there was no discouraging him; he was plainly under the deepest-rooted conviction that a woman must succumb to a series of frontal attacks.

His perseverance was not without its effect. It compelled the Esmeralda to be always talking of him, to Pollyooly, to the Honorable John Ruffin, to other admirers who could not long remain ignorant of that yellow, passionate presence. He was getting on her nerves.

"It's really getting awful," she said to the Honorable John Ruffin when her large round admirer made his first sudden appearance in the little Soho café.

"If he goes on sticking to it like this, you'll have to marry him to get rid of him," said the Honorable John Ruffin.

"I wouldn't marry him for one of his silly palaces in every country in the world!" cried the Esmeralda. "Why, he'd probably murder me out of jealousy before we'd been married a week. Look how he scowls when he sees me with you—with anybody."

"Yes; I've noticed that the presence of Pollyooly affects him painfully," said the Honorable John Ruffin pensively. "And those scowls do belie that tender heart of his about which he writes to you."

"It's all very well to laugh," said the Esmeralda uneasily. "But I'm getting nervous. He won't go on in this peaceful way much longer. I know he won't. I've heard stories about him."

"The Yellow Peril," said the Honorable John Ruffin. "But I do wish I could think of some way of ridding you of him without a row—which would be very pleasant for me, but very unpleasant for you."

"If you have a row with him, I'll never speak to you again—never," said the Esmeralda with a note of acute anxiety in her tone. "He's really dangerous."

"Oh, come, we're in London, and the Twentieth Century," he said in a reassuring tone.

"A lot he cares about the Twentieth Century!" cried the Esmeralda.

"Well, well, let it be a warning to you, Pollyooly. I have noticed a disposition on your part to grow up beautiful. Let this break you of it," he said solemnly.

"Yes, sir," said Pollyooly. "I'll try."

Suddenly the Yellow Peril, as they now called him, disappeared. For a week they saw nothing of him; and the flow of votive offerings ceased. But for all this complete cessation of the persecution, the Esmeralda remained uneasy.

A week later she and Pollyooly came out of the Varolium to find no admirer awaiting them. They got into her motor brougham; and she called to the driver to take them to the Temple. The Esmeralda talked away with her usual cheerful animation, until it struck Pollyooly that they were a long while coming to the Temple, and, looking out, she saw that they were in a street strange to her.

"He's going the wrong way. And how fast he's driving!" she said.

The Esmeralda looked out of the window; and then she touched the electric bell in the front of the brougham. The driver took no notice; and the brougham went faster.

"Whatever's the matter?" cried the Esmeralda, tugging at the window-strap. "The man must be drunk."

The window did not stir. She tried the door, then the other door, then the other window. None of them stirred. They were fastened in.

"It's that brute Perez! He's carrying us off!" cried the Esmeralda in a sudden flash of enlightenment.

If Diego Perez was not carrying them off, some one else was, for the Esmeralda pressed the driver's bell and rapped and rapped on the window to no purpose. He took no notice; and the brougham pursued its swift course.

The Esmeralda was more furious than frightened; and she said everything that a naturally eloquent tongue could say about her South American adorer. It was doubtless comforting, but it availed nothing. The brougham was presently rushing through the moonlit country, along lanes, through dark and silent villages. At last it came to a standstill before a dark, gabled house, at the end of a long, dark avenue. The front door was thrown open and a man and woman, both masked, came down the steps.

The driver, masked himself, opened the window, from the outside, put in his head, and said, "It's no good your making any fuss, miss; we're three to one. And nobody's going to do you any harm, so you'd better come quietly."

The other man and the woman came close to the door. The Esmeralda got out of the brougham without a word and Pollyooly followed her. At the sight of her the man and woman began to jabber loudly and quickly in a foreign tongue, pointing at her.

The driver shrugged his shoulders and said, "Well, if this ain't a rum start! Wherever did you come from, missie? 'Owever, it ain't no business of mine; I've done my little bit," then, turning to the two foreigners, he added, "It ain't no use your jabbering at me. I don't understand a word you say."

They stopped jabbering; and the Esmeralda and Pollyooly followed the woman into the house, up the stairs, to a large and airy bedroom on the first floor. It was lighted by two oil lamps, and on a table in the middle supper was set out.

The woman shut the door on them and locked it.

The Esmeralda laughed a short, angry, laugh, and said, "Well, of all the ridiculous things! All the same, I wish I hadn't let you in for this, Pollyooly."

"I don't mind," said Pollyooly quickly, smiling at her. "The Lump's quite safe with Mrs. Brown. She's very fond of him." Then her face fell; and she added, "It's only Mr. Ruffin's bacon and his breakfast. There'll be no one to get it for him."

"I shouldn't worry about that. He can get it at an hotel."

"Not bacon as he likes it. Besides, he does so want looking after," said Pollyooly with the air of a distressed mother.

The Esmeralda shot the two bolts on the inner side of the door, observing that though they could not get out, nobody else need get in. She opened the door on the right of the big bed, and found a comfortable bathroom. She opened the doors of the wardrobe, and found on its shelves a dressing-gown, a kimono, slippers, stockings, and a pile of filmy garments. The kidnappers had plainly taken thought for her comfort.

Then she opened one of the windows. It was thirty feet from the ground and looked out on to a lawn which ran to the edge of a wood.

"Isn't it beautiful?" said Pollyooly, leaning out of it. "I do wish the Lump was here."

"Though I'm sorry to have let you in for this, I'm very glad to have you here," said the Esmeralda, hugging her. "You're a comfort, and a bit of a protection too."

They looked out of the window for a while; then they had supper and went to bed. Pollyooly was up betimes and at the window, enjoying the country sights and sounds and scents, longing to be out among them.

KINDNESS IN NEW YORK.

Two blind men who live at Mills hotel No. 3 have joined forces for mutual profit, and by going arm and arm and feeling the way with their canes they are able to take walks together, says the New York Sun. A stranger spoke to them on Seventh avenue the other day. If they'd like to stroll up to Central park and lie on the grass for a while the stranger would be their guide. He knew they couldn't get around a great deal, and wanted to give them a pleasant afternoon.

Strangers like this being rare in New York and blindness being rather a hum-drum state, they were eager to accept his offer. Wouldn't he have dinner with them at the hotel before the expedition started? He would, and they took him up to their rooms. Then suddenly he was out of earshot and with him had gone $15 worth of trinkets and toilet articles from the rooms. In the evening the blind men, arm in arm, made their way to the nearest station house and reported the theft, but as his voice was all they could describe of the thief his capture isn't likely.

DIRECT ELECTION COMPROMISE PLAN

Bryan Proposes Solution by Reviving Scheme He Offered in 1894.

GIVES STATES OPTION

Chicago, July 6.—The Tribune today prints the following special from Washington:

William Jennings Bryan has made a proposal which may straighten out the tangle between the senate and house of representatives with reference to the direct election of senators.

He has revived and submitted to the conferees of the senate and house the plan he advocated in 1894 when a member of congress. This, he believes, [illegible] on the troublesome question over the continued control of the federal government over the time, place, and manner of holding elections.

The senate resolution left this power in the hands of the United States. The house resolution confined it to the states. The democrats to a large extent, particularly those of the south, have insisted upon the adoption of the house scheme. It has been evident that unless one side or the other gave way there would be no action and submission of the proposed constitutional amendment to the states for ratification might be delayed indefinitely.

Conferees Struggle With Question.

In an attempt to reach an agreement the vice president appointed as conferees on the part of the senate Messrs. Clark of Wyoming, Nelson of Minnesota, and Bacon of Georgia, while Speaker Clark yesterday named as representatives of the house Messrs. Rucker of Missouri, Conry of New York, and Olmstead of Pennsylvania.

The composition of this committee is such as to indicate great difficulty in effecting a satisfactory compromise. Mr. Bryan's plan, however, may be the solution of the situation. It is as follows:

The senate of the United States shall be composed of two senators from each state, chosen for six years, and each senator shall have one vote. The senators shall be chosen by the legislatures of the several states, unless the people of any state, either through their legislatures or by the constitution of the state, shall provide for the election of United States senators by direct vote of the people. Then, in such case, during the existence of such statutory or constitutional provision, United States senators shall be elected in such state at large by direct vote of the people; a plurality shall elect, and the electors shall have the qualifications requisite for electors of the most numerous branch of the state legislature.

Mr. Bryan explained that under his plan it would be left optional with a state whether it should elect senators by a direct vote or not.

"The justification for this plan," he said, "is simple and plain. If we leave it optional with the states, we are not compelled either to prohibit federal interference or to provide for it. The optional plan gives to the republican party all the protection which it now has. It gives to the democrats who want to prohibit federal interference all the protection which they now have.

"If we adopt this substitute we leave it to the states to say whether they wish to elect senators by the people under the constitution as it is now. If the republicans say it will give the right of federal interference, let them believe so and vote for it; but it does not alter the constitution.

"If those who oppose federal interference fear the general government will attempt to control the election of senators, I say to them this bill provides that the state may go back and elect by the present plan, if it desires, and thus secure all the protection it has now. Therefore it gives every safeguard now provided.

"It gives to the man who favors federal control every safeguard he has today. My substitute neither adds to nor takes from the constitution, so far as federal control is concerned."

Brought Down to Simple Issue.

Mr. Bryan insists that if the question of federal control be eliminated the issue is brought down to the simple proposition: "Are you in favor of election of senators by the people?" As a majority of states have so declared themselves, there should then be no difficulty about action by congress and, what is equally important, action by the states.

It is expected the Bryan democrats in both the senate and house will make a determined effort to obtain the adoption of the plan of Mr. Bryan. So far as the conferees are concerned, Mr. Bacon and Mr. Rucker are likely to favor it. Mr. Conry is a Tammany democrat, who voted for the adoption of the Cannon rules, and probably will do what he is told by Boss Murphy in New York. What attitude the republican conferees would take cannot be forecast, but their disposition would be to preserve the power of federal control and to make a determined fight for that principle.

Even should the conference committee advocate the Bryan compromise, its adoption is not certain. There are members of the senate and house who are opposed on principle to anything Bryan approves, whether it be good or bad, and it may be expected they will talk in opposition to the plan. Moreover, there are republicans who emphatically believe there should be no question as to the power of the federal government to absolutely control the time, place and manner of holding senatorial elections. They will leave no stone unturned to prevent this authority from being even questioned.

ON A BOER FARM.

Not a Very Inviting Existence From an American Point of View.

An American woman traveling in South Africa was detained by floods and compelled to spend a month on a Boer farm.

"The first night's monotony," she writes in Health Culture, "was broken by the roaring of ostriches under our window. We thought it was a tame lion.

"The farmer and his family lived chiefly on sour bread and sour skimmed milk. I was therefore hungry most of the time and the ripe figs hanging in clusters were pretty alluring. After pushing back the skin of the fig and enjoying the soft fruit with its tropical taste I had a refreshing night's sleep, only to awaken in the morning pretty well scared, for my tongue was so swollen and black that I could not talk.

"The Boer wife laughed and enjoyed my discomfiture and explained that the skin of the fig had numerous fine thorns and I had not been careful to remove it when eating.

"When I told the farmer's wife that I liked buttermilk in quantity I noticed that I had a cupful or so given me, but she threw it by the pailful to the pigs. They were of far more consequence to her than I, for they would stay longer with her and were her familiars. I was not.

"Then, again, when I was hungry for butter on my bread, a white clammy substance made from 'sheeptail fat' was handed to me, and I could not allow the farmer's wife to see me quiver. She sold her butter in the village close by at seventy-five cents a pound, more or less. Sour bread and green strawberries (plenty of them) were considered good enough.

"This Boer family was one of the wealthiest of their kind. There was not a ripple of fun or exuberant life in anything but the live stock. Conversation was a dead language—unknown.

"The women are mute beings, accepting their destiny with a deep stillness. The wife gives of her strength to the limit, and dies after giving birth to a dozen or more children, to make way for wife number two, who gives another dozen children to her country. Her adobe house, with its dirt floor made of anthill clay mixed ith beef gall, is a chamber of horror to an American traveler.

"The farmer depends upon his ten to eighteene children, of all sizes, to help him. A Kaffir as an employe is unpendable as the wind that blows. Yet that Kaffir is the hired man in the mines and elsewhere in South Africa. The white man as a day laborer is a general failure. He cannot be worked in droves like the Kaffir from the interior, whose language, in clicks and vowel sounds, is hardly human.

"The Boer is not long lived. One seldom met an aged Boer of the old stock. Oom Paul Kruger, who was 75 years old when he died, was an exception. Hatred toward the Uitlander and the lust for gold and power was what kept the fires of life burning at white heat within him.

"To stem the elements alone in Africa takes the stoutest heart. Fevers assail the discouraged and underfed home boy. The easily forded streams become rivers, like swirling Niagaras, in a few hours and the terrific thunderstorms paralyze one sensitive to electrical influences.

"There is not pretty little, far-off streak in the sky which the amateur photographer can catch on his film, but the air is charged with electricity so appalling in its violent hued and deep orange earth-bound clouds that one has to come to a complete standstill whether walking or riding on the open veldt, so as not to attract the ribbon-like lightning playing around him and venting its fury on any moving object."

SOLVES A MYSTERY.

"I want to thank ydo from the bottom of my heart," wrote C. B. Rader, of Lewisburg, W. Va., "for the wonderful double benefit I got from Electric Bitters, in curing me of both a severe case of stomach trouble and of rheumatism from which I had been an almost helpless sufferer for ten years. It suited my case as though made just for me." For dyspepsia, indigestion, jaundice and to rid the system of kidney poisons that cause rheumatism, Electric Bitters has no equal. Try them. DANDRUFF, FALLING HAIR, ITCHING SCALP QUICKLY STOPPED

A Harmless, Old-Fashioned Remedy, Brings Back the Color to Gray Hair.

How many old-fashioned remedies are being used, which goes to show that it is hard to improve some of our grandmothers' old-time, tried remedies. For instance, for keeping the hair dark, soft and glossy nothing equals our grandmothers' "sage tea." Although, by the addition of sulphur and other ingredients, this old-fashioned brew has been made more effective as a scalp tonic and color restorer.

Nowadays, when our hair comes out or gets faded or gray, instead of going to the garden or garret for herbs and making the "tea" ourselves, we simply go to the nearest drug store and ask for a bottle of Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Hair Remedy.

Druggists are authorized to sell it under guarantee that the money will be refunded if it fails to do exactly as represented.

This preparation is offered to the public at fifty cents a bottle, and is recommended and sold by all druggists.

WAS A FAIRY.

Peevish Policeman Attacks Old Organ Grinder.

BEATS HIS HEAD WITH CLUB.

Blows Do Not Worry the Recipient One Bit, and He Eventually Gets Even With Cruel Tormentor—Story Proves Fairies Can Be Masculine.

By M. QUAD.

[Copyright, 1911, by Associated Literary Press.]

NO one should make the mistake of thinking that all fairies are females, because they are not. Now and then you meet an old man who is also on the job and can give you a surprise party. It will, therefore, be a good thing to keep your eyes peeled for old boys who look as if they might have a trick up their sleeve.

Once upon a time an old, old man appeared on the street corner of a city with a wheezy old hand organ. His face was pinched and drawn. Even the district messenger boys who flew past him at their usual lightning speed needed but one glance at him to realize that it was Lent all the year round at his boarding house.

The hair of the old man was as white as snow, and he had whiskers that a colonel of cavalry would have been proud of. His clothing was in rags. You could have bet your bottom dollar against a banana that he hadn't had a chummy talk with a Fifth avenue tailor in a thousand years. Yes, he was in rags, and you didn't have to look three times to see his fourteen toes sticking out to the weather.

There was a time when this old man's hand organ played such lively tunes as "Buffalo Gals" and "A Hot Time," but now the best it could do was to give out a few choky bars of "The Girl I Left Behind Me."

Not a Penny in His Clothes.

Not one red cent did that poor old man have in his clothes. A boy came along and offered to sell him the Waldorf-Astor tavern for 15 cents; but, alas, he could not even ask one of the chauffeurs who hang out on the Thirty-fourth street side to have a pony of beer with him.

It was just awful to see that old man grinding away and getting older every minute and know that he hadn't any stock in a water power company and not one chance in a thousand to marry an heiress. There were motormen on the passing cars who glanced at him and probably wiped away their tears. They realized that if their conductors didn't divide fairly on the knockdowns they would be grinding a hand organ some day themselves.

"Poor man! Poor old chap!" exclaimed many people who passed.

None of them followed it up by dropping a penny in the ragged old cap, but that is not necessary in a great city. If you sympathize with a poor man that pays his rent and board. A passing telephone girl did stop and take out her purse, but, finding that it contained only a nickel and remembering that she was to contest in a gum chewing match that afternoon, she passed on.

Stuck to His Corner.

Four long hours passed away. During this time there were three thunder showers and a hailstorm, and Commissioner Flynn raided three more gambling houses. The old man had not moved from his corner. He wasn't spiked down, but it was as good as any other street corner to him. When you get above ninety years old you don't care a darn which corner you are on.

Then a policeman came sauntering that way. He had just been fined three days' pay for seeing his captain drink a glass of beer in a saloon, and the thing rankled—that is, it rankled because the captain hadn't asked him to pour some of the same down his own neck. No, the valiant officer was not in a mood to stand any back talk. He was, indeed, looking for some one to give him a bit of sass when he caught sight of the old man in rags. His face brightened, and that beer he didn't get was momentarily forgotten. Only momentarily, however. He meant to write a letter to the papers that evening and tell how the police force was disorganized and the lid was off.

"Now, then, you ——, what in —— are you doing here?" he demanded as he approached the old man.

Was Easily Understood.

His English was plain and perfect. Even one of the gas house gang could have understood that he was making an inquiry about something.

"Alas, sir, I am an old man!" was the reply, and the pathos of the tone and words went right to the heart of the peanut man on the corner.

"But what do I care for old men?" shouted the officer as he blustered around. "Can't you see that you are interrupting Broadway traffic?"

"But, kind sir, I am on Forty-second street."

"But you are drawing a crowd."

"That cannot be, as us two are alone."

"Don't dispute me!" exclaimed the officer as he thought of the loss of his three days' pay. "I say you are right in the way of people who want to get into the lunch house."

"Which is up on the corner, officer."

"Oh, you'll talk back, will you? Then take that and that!"

And the officer swung his club and batted that poor old man over the coconaut so hard that the echoes were heard a block away and men asked each other what skyscraper had tumbled down.

Comments From Observers.

"For shame!" cried a stenographer who was passing.

"I donta lika dat!" called the peanut man from his stand.

"Gee whiz, but s'posin' that was my head!" shouted a taxi driver as he put on more speed.

Did the old fellow fall over dead? Did he get up and stagger away, leaving a trail of blood behind him? Not on your life! He wasn't even made woozy by the blows. You may pound fairies over the head all day with a crowbar and they won't feel it. They are built that way—to stand so much pressure to the square inch.

"Officer, hast thou an aged father?" asked the old man as he looked up.

"I hast not."

"Nor an aged mother?"

"None. I hustled them off the face of the earth years ago."

"And doth not the sight of these gray hairs and this venerable blue whisker raise emotions in your breast?"

"Not a darned one, you old panhandler!" shouted the enraged officer as he administered some more club.

Took What Was Coming.

The old man made no effort to save himself. He took just what was coming to him, and his smile didn't come off. The officer ought to have judged by that that his victim was holding a royal flush, but he didn't. Some of "the finest" are put on for size instead of brains. He just spat on his hands and laid himself out to batter that poor old man to jam, and he was battering away when a newsboy whispered in his ear:

"Cut it out, cully, and make a sneak! Dat old dozer is a fairy or I'll never sell an extra again when nuthin' has happened."

The officer sprang back, but it was too late. The old man raised a palsied hand and muttered a few words, and where was that policeman? Turned into the stairway that leads up to the Sixth Avenue "L," and there he is today. There was no hunting for a clew. Just turned into an iron stairway for people to walk up and down by thousands every day. Not one of his six children came home, and after thinking over the case for a week or so his widow married the man who drives the red four horse truck loaded with soap about the streets.

"No," she replied; "I would prefer to dance."

"Yes, I am awfully tired. I've not missed a dance this evening. Suppose we sit it out here in this lovely corner."

"Perhaps you would prefer to have me excuse you altogether?"

"Not for the world. Now, please, don't be a naughty boy."

"You know how to keep a fellow up in the air, all right, if that's your object."

"Don't say that, Mr. Waddums—Charley."

"Go on; call me Charley again. It's the first time you ever did it."

"Now, please, don't look at me like that. Everybody here will be talking about us."

"What is the matter with the way I look at you?"

"You looked for a moment as if—as if"—

"As if what?"

"Well, as if you were about to catch me in your arms right here before everybody. I shall have to be cross with you if you don't do better."

"Haug it, how can I do better? When I look at you I don't care who knows that I love you."

"Sh-sh! You mustn't talk like that here. Somebody will be sure to hear you."

"I don't care. Let the whole world hear me if it wants to."

"Come; take me somewhere out of this. I'm awfully thirsty."

"I think there is a punch bowl in the conservatory."

"No, no; I won't go there with you."

"Please."

"No."

"You don't care for me."

"Yes, I do, Charley. I care for you very much."

"Then why don't you go to the conservatory with me?"

"Let's go out on the lawn."

"But there are other people out on the lawn."

"There are other people in the conservatory too."

"Oh, that's it! I didn't know."

"One of them is a former husband of mine, and the other is a girl I hate."

"Evelyn, darling! Poor little girl! Will you marry me?"

"Perhaps."

"Perhaps! Why do you say that?"

"Wait till they come out."

"Why should we wait till they come out? What difference will it make whether they come out or not?"

"Oh, no difference, I hope. Only I want to see how she looks."

"That's the way you feel about it, eh? You're using me just to have something to fall back upon, are you? If she looks happy—looks as if they had fixed it up—you'll take me. Is that it?"

"Charley! You silly boy! If she looks happy I'll not take you. If she looks as if they had fixed it up I'll win him away from her. If you really love me, pray that she may look miserable and disappointed when they come out."

Danderine

GROWS HAIR and we can

PROVE IT!

A lady from Minnesota writes: "As a result of using Danderine, my hair is close to five feet in length."

Beautiful Hair at Small Cost

HAIR troubles, like many other diseases, have been wrongly diagnosed and altogether misunderstood. The hair itself is not the thing to be treated, for the reason that it is simply a product of the scalp and wholly dependent upon its action. The scalp is the very soil in which the hair is produced, nurtured and grown, and it alone should receive the attention if results are to be expected. It would do no earthly good to treat the stem of a plant with a view of making it grow and become more beautiful—the soil in which the plant grows must be attended to. Therefore, the scalp in which the hair grows must receive the attention if you are to expect it to grow and become more beautiful.

Loss of hair is caused by the scalp drying up, or losing its supply of moisture or nutriment; when baldness occurs the scalp has simply lost all its nourishment, leaving nothing for the hair to feed upon (a plant or even a tree would die under similar conditions.)

The natural thing to do in either case, is to feed and replenish the soil or scalp as the case may be, and your crop will grow and multiply as nature intended it should.

Knowlton's Danderine has a most wonderful effect upon the hair glands and tissues of the scalp. It is the only remedy for the hair ever discovered that is similar to the natural hair foods or liquids of the scalp.

It penetrates the pores quickly and the hair soon shows the effects of its wonderfully exhilarating and life-producing qualities.

One 25-cent bottle is enough to convince you of its great worth as a hair growing and hair beautifying remedy—try it and see for yourself.

NOW at all druggists in three sizes, 25c, 50c and $1.00 per bottle.

Misery and Suffering Banished

By the Remarkable Methods of a MASTER SPECIALIST

The world moves rapidly, the constant efforts necessary to keep pace with the changing times and the ever increasing demand upon the nerve force have brought about new and complicated forms of disease that have baffled the skill of the physician and have made it absolutely necessary, in order to successfully treat diseases, to specialize or devote one's entire time and study to a very limited number. Years and years have been wasted because the physicians have tried the impossible feat of attempting to understand all of the many forms of human disease. In the meantime thousands and thousands of people have succumbed and hundreds of thousands of people are living lives of untold misery and suffering, that could be restored to health and happiness were the right kind of methods used in treating them.

I have devoted years to the exclusive study of PELVIC, CHRONIC and NERVOUS diseases and have perfected new and original methods that CURE where the ordinary methods have failed. I have hundreds of letters on file in my office from grateful patients whom I have cured. Many of these I have cured after they had vainly sought relief from other doctors and specialists—in some cases for years.

One man spent $3,000 in his efforts to get well and suffered untold agony for years. I cured him in just a few weeks' time.

OTHERS TREAT, I CURE.

Another endured a "living death" for ten years and was pronounced incurable. I cured him in three months' time. These and many others I can refer you to as living proof of my methods.

These facts together with the fact that I have been in Fort Wayne for years and am permanently established can only point to one conclusion. If you place your case in my hands you can be certain of a cure and at a fee that is as low as possible and consistent with honest, scientific treatment.

You cannot afford to suffer longer nor can you afford to experiment with your health by treating with unskilled doctors or specialists and so-called specialists or hirelings of a COMPANY of doubtful standing, where you may never know who is going to be there to treat you or whether anyone will be there at all when you return.

The lack of VITAL FORCE or FUNCTIONAL DECLINE can always be attributed to a diseased condition of one or more of the organs of the body.

On account of the intimate relationship of the Pelvic organs with the sympathetic nervous system and the frequence of their derangement, it is a fact that in the great majority of cases of Nervous disease or breakdown the case can be attributed to a disease of one or more of the Pelvic organs.

The fact that these diseases have been hitherto unsuccessfully treated can be directly traced to two causes. The ignorance of the physician or specialist who has failed to recognize the cause of the disease, thereby doing no good whatever, but actually injuring the diseased organs themselves, making the cure harder to accomplish, trouble or the fact that he not recognizing the cause treats the symptom instead of the disease.

I do not treat symptoms, but the disease itself, and as the organs regain their normal condition the symptoms invariably disappear.

The man who is weak in any way and is unable to accomplish that which he expects is often suffering from some hidden or obscure disease that is slowly but surely undermining his health and unfitting him for performing the duties that God had intended him for; besides not being able to accomplish his purpose in life, or to perform the work of a strong, healthy man, the injury falls, not only upon him, but those dependent upon the fruits of his daily labor.

As another illustration: One man who had been afflicted for years and had been unsuccessfully treated by other specialists and doctors came to me almost a total wreck. I cured him in about four months' time. He is now entirely well and earning about $30 per month more than he ever did before. I can refer you to him. Do you want any more proof? If you do, simply call and I will give you all you want.

EXAMINATION—My facilities for examination are unexcelled. I learn the exact condition of the rectum, the bladder and every organ of the genito-urinary system. This in itself is of the highest importance, inasmuch as a broken down nervous system and many or most of the troubles of the stomach, liver and kidneys, etc., are reflex and are the direct results of some pelvic lesion or disease.

NERVOUS BREAKDOWN and nearly all nervous diseases are the direct results of chronic or imperfectly treated Pelvic Diseases, such as Varicocele, Piles, Fistula, Stricture, etc. I not only remove the cause, but my many years of experience in the treatment of nervous and pelvic diseases enable me by my special methods to revitalize the entire nervous system and to restore to perfect health nearly all sufferers from nervous breakdown and vital weakness.

BLOOD POISON—I use only the most advanced methods in the treatment of blood poison and kindred diseases.

PROSTATIC ENLARGEMENT—This may result from a number of causes. The constant jarring and vibration of trains and trolley cars are a very potent cause. Bicycle riding and the use of riding implements on the farm are factors in producing this disease. In fact, the causes are so many and varied that fully 75 per cent. of all male adults are afflicted to a greater or lesser extent by this disease. The disease is so little understood, and as one of the principal symptoms is a pain in the back, it is usually called kidney trouble and treated with local applications or sedatives which can do no possible good whatever. I reduce the enlargement and have been able to cure about 90 per cent of all cases.

VARICOCELE—I cure Varicocele in a few days' or weeks' time without the use of the knife.

STRICTURE—I readily remove Stricture by my dissolvent method without the use of instruments.

RUPTURE, PILES, FISTULA, ETC., cured without detention from business and without the use of the knife.

If you live out of town write or write on what train you will arrive and I will arrange my engagements so that I can see you at once.

WILL INVESTIGATE PLAINFIELD.

Governor Promises to Look Into Conditions in Boys' School.

Indianapolis, Ind., July .—Action may soon be taken by Governor Marshall to prevent boys of under ten years of age being sent to the Indiana boys' school, at Plainfield as "incorrigible." He never has been in favor, he says, of sending—boys under ten years of age to the institution, and its superintendent, Guy C. Hanna, yesterday advised him that there are now 630 inmates, though the normal capacity is 400. The school is uncomfortably and even dangerously overcrowded, he reported.

Mr. Hanna said he believed many of the boys in the school under ten years of age had been sent by judges because parents deliberately declined to assume responsibility, when, as a matter of fact, the boys "incorrigibility" could have been corrected at home.

The governor promised Mr. Hanna that he soon would visit the institution and then would decide on a remedial measure.

DO THESE THINGS INTEREST YOU?

Do you or your children ever drink soda water or eat ice cream? Look what chances you take. Soda fountain syrup often contains benzoate. Much commercial ice cream is made of glue. Such sweets will kill your children. The story on page 79 of Pearson's Magazine for July explains the kind to dodge.

With the Initiative, would we have storage regulation to prevent foodstuffs being stored for high prices? If the Recall could be applied to Lorimer, what would happen? Why don't we have these laws? Do you want them? Look on page 87 of Pearson's Magazine for July.

Thirty thousand war veterans, disabled and aged, live in Soldiers' Homes. The homes are beautiful on the outside, but inside!—look inside. Jail fare is better. These old soldiers are shamefully treated. Look inside the homes. Read the story on page 3 of Pearson's Magazine for July.

Are you a baseball fan? Look at Umpire Billy Evans's story on page 40 of Pearson's Magazine for July. He describes famous disputed plays, and shows how umpires look upon players. It's a story that will do fans good. It's a bully good baseball story.

Do you like good stories? Then you'll like Pearson's Magazine for July. It has eight rattling good complete stories—romance, mystery and adventure—eight stories which make entertainment that is entertainment. Eight complete stories of the time-destroying kind.

The way to get a farm is shown by Governor Hadley of Missouri on page 63 of Pearson's Magazine for July. Mr. Hadley explains how the city poor may get farms of their own, and in doing that shows dissatisfied farmers that their own farms can be made to pay.

Another tale of the Apaches of New York is told by Alfred Henry Lewis, beginning on page 113 of Pearson's Magazine for July. This is the story of Little Bow Kum, the Chinese rose, and the New York Gun-Men. It is a first-class "police" tale.

Fifteen years ago a few men were struggling hard to make one automobile run. To-day thousands of men make thousands of cars every year. That's some development. And they all run. The story of the first cars and their makers is on page 129 of Pearson's Magazine for July.

M'NAMARA DEFENSE SPRINGS SURPRISE

When Called on to Plead John Denies Court's Jurisdiction.

PROSECUTION JOLTED

Los Angeles, Cal., July 6.—The defense in the McNamara alleged dynamite conspiracy case sprung a surprise today when John J. McNamara, the accused Indiana labor leader, and his brother, James B. McNamara, were called into Judge Bordwell's division of the supreme court.

Both men were summoned to plead to nineteen charges of murder, the result of the destruction of the Times newspaper plant on Oct. 1, 1910. In addition John J. McNamara was expected to plead to the charge that he had conspired to destroy the Llewellyn Iron works. Instead he challenged the jurisdiction of the court, claiming that it had no rights to exact a plea or to try him on either the nineteen charges of murder or the Llewellyn Iron works indictment because she was extradited from Indianapolis not for murder but for dynamiting.

This move plainly surprised the prosecution.

A motion for the quashing of the indictment was made only in the case of James B. McNamara, who entered no plea whatever, holding that the indictments against him should not stand because the grand jury was biased and because Earl Rogers, who acted as a special district attorney to aid the jury during the investigation had previously acted on behalf of the Times and Merchants' and Manufacturers' association during the search for evidence.

The prosecution met the move of the defense with a motion to disallow the plea to jurisdiction.

An argument on the relavancy of John McNamara's action promised to continue all day.

THE LOCAL MARKET.

New Hay and New Wheat Coming into City This Week.

New hay and new wheat have been coming into the local markets this week. The first load of new hay of the season came into the city Wednesday and sold at $12 a ton, as did also the other loads coming in during the day. New wheat began arriving Monday, and much of it has been marketed up to the present. It sold for 80 cents a bushel, the old product remaining at 83, which has been the price for several days. The grain is in excellent condition, as is also the hay.

Prices on the local produce market are unchanged. Butter is 23 to 25 and eggs, the perfectly fresh, 16 and 17. Berries are plentiful, as are also cherries, the latter selling at 8 and 10 cents a quart. The cherry crop this year was a big one and immense quantities of them have been canned by families for home use.

THE MARKETS

GRAIN AND PROVISIONS.

Chicago Market.

Chicago, Ill., July 6.—Violent breaks in the price of corn today followed the bulge of more than five cents scored last night. Cool weather and rain brought about almost a complete change of feeling. In consequence oats, too, wheat and even provisions fell with corn. Everybody was trying to sell corn, and there were practically no buyers in sight. Accordingly, the market at the opening dropped all the way from 2 to 3 cents under latest previous quotations. So unanimous was the reversal of outlook by the trade that no sign of reaction appeared, and the market hung sullenly around the lower level reached at the outset. Soaking rains were reported from Nebraska, Kansas, Iowa and Illinois, accompanied by a decided downward movement of the mercury. In addition the Liverpool market showed but little response to yesterday's big advance on this side of the Atlantic. Moreover, a leading authority was quoted as pronouncing the condition of the crop excellent barring only that moisture would be needed to maintain the standard. September started at 63¾@64½c, a decline of 2¼c to 3c and for a long time did not rally more than a sixteenth above that range.

The oats market was exactly like that for corn. There was a general rush to sell and no demand of any consequence. News of a probable big crop in Canada added to the bearish feeling in the oats crowd. Sept. opened ⅞c to 1⅜c off at 45c to 45½c and recovered only to 45⅝c.

Business in wheat was not large but nearly all orders were to sell. Support was poor from the very outset and did not improve even under the stimulus of bearish reports from North Dakota. The opening was ½@⅝c to 1⅝c lower. Sept. started at 90½c to 90⅝c, a loss of ½@⅝c to 1 @1⅛c, and sagged to 90c.

The provisions market was carried down by the weight of grain and hogs. First sales were ten cents off to five cents up with September delivery $15.75 to $15.90 for pork, $8.40½ for lard, and $8.55 to $8.57½ for ribs.

STOCKS AND BONDS.

The Day on Wall Street.

New York, July 5.—The market made a spirited recovery from yesterday's weakness in the early trading today. Prices were carried upward in almost every department by a heavy buying movement. Among the rise the strongest issues were Union Pacific and Great Northern preferred which gained 1½; Southern Pacific 1¼; Reading 1⅜ and Canadian Pacific and St. Paul a point. United States Steel advanced more briskly then for some time, gaining a point in the first few minutes.

The demand for stocks became more urgent on the announcement of beneficial rains in Kansas and Nebraska and a break in the corn and wheat options of from 1 to 3 cents. Union Pacific, Southern Pacific and Great Northern preferred sold 2 points above yesterday's closing. General Electric 2½, and the list generally from 1 to 1¼ up.

Reports of crop prospects were again the governing feature in the stock market. Prices rose rapidly during the morning in response to advices from the west that conditions had been improved by rains and that the hot wave had been broken in crop regions. London bought stocks in this market for the first time this week, and the reversal of position was interpreted as an indication that the tension caused by the Moroccoan situation was relaxing. The volume of trading was not large enough to suggest that prices were being forced up by organized bullish effort, as the market grew dull after the first upturn. Shorts grew more alarmed as the crop bulletins came in and their buying was instrumental in sending up prices of the chief grain carriers materially. Union Pacific was the principal feature, its rise at midday amounting to nearly three points. United States Steel rose 1½ the demand being still unabated by reports of further improement in the steel and iron trades and in an advance in the price of basic iron.

Bonds were firm.

Dullness in the market was accompanied by a slight lowering of prices, Union Pacific and St. Paul reacting ½ a point.

TWO DIE IN THE WATER.

Indianapolis Lad Tries to Save Brother and Both Drown.

Indianapolis, July 6.—Victor and Carl Duderstadt, brothers, aged eight and eleven respectively, were drowned today while attempting to cross Fall Creek at a ripple near the Thirtieth street bridge. Both bodies were recovered later.

The younger brother started across the stream in the lead. He slipped from a stone and the current carried him into a deep hole made by dredging. Carl jumped in to save his brtiher and both sank. George Burnie, who was fishing nearby, ran to the hole and pjumped in but was forced to land by a swirling undercurgent.

Mayor Shank went withthe police to the scene of the drowning and later notified the father, August F. Duderstadt, a florist, living in North Senate avenue, of the accident.

Mrs. Bert McMillan, of 2340 Smith street, was taken to the Lutheran hospital this afternoon to undergo an operation for appendicitis.

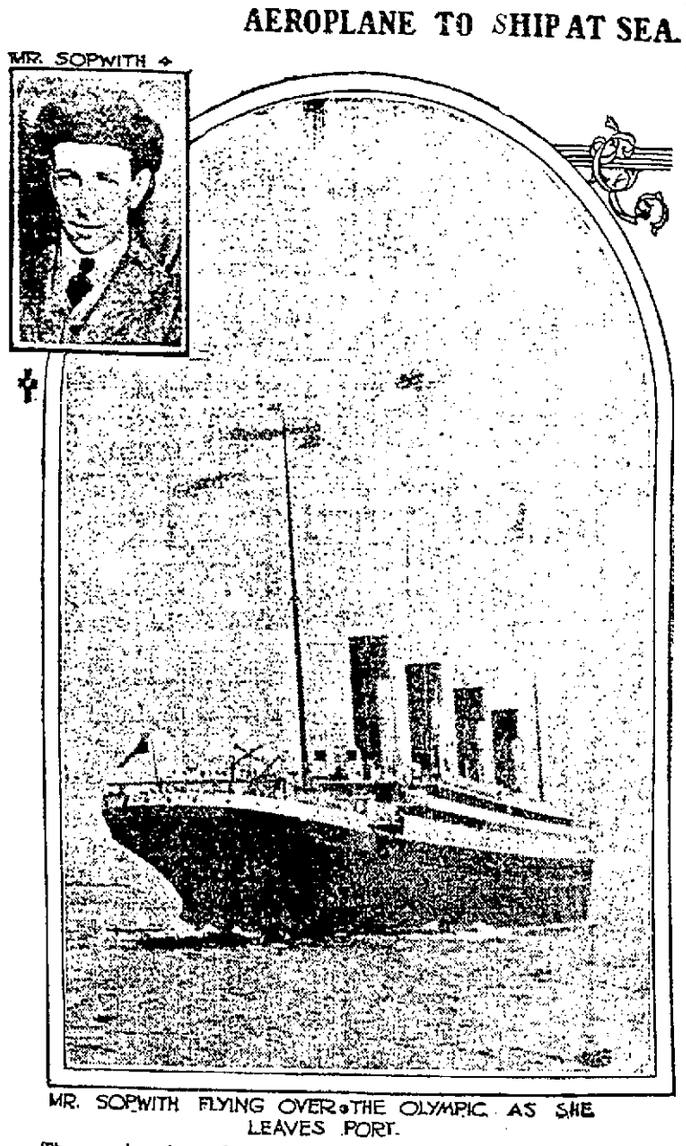
PARCEL DELIVERY BY AEROPLANE TO SHIP AT SEA.



MR. SOPWITH FLYING OVER THE OLYMPIC AS SHE LEAVES PORT.

The aeroplane has at last been put to commercial use in a most remarkable manner. When W. A. Burpee, the millionnaire seedman of Philadelphia, left New York on the Olympic he suddenly remembered that he had forgotten several important articles of wearing apparel. The liner had already left its pier. The Olympic is equipped with wireless telegraph, as is also a well known New York department store, a member of which was sailing on the same vessel. To him Mr. Burpee made known his predicament.

In a jiffy the order was sent by wireless, accompanied by a request that the stuff be delivered on the Olympic even though an aeroplane had to be employed. Five minutes after the wireless was received a contract was closed with Aviator Sopwith, who was tuning up his machine on Long Island. Three-quarters of an hour later the aeroplane skimmed gracefully over the deck of the Olympic and dropped the package for Mr. Burpee, who was almost overcome with astonishment.

WE ALWAYS GROW.

"Careful studies and measurements have shown that our time of actual maturity and arrest of growth in physical characters, such as height, weight and chest girth, is much later than formerly supposed," says Dr. Woods Hutchinson, in Hampton's. "Instead of reaching, as was at one time confidently stated, our full height at 18, our full strength at 23 and our full chest girth at 25, as a matter of fact we continue to increase slowly, it is true, in all these respects until 35, 38 and even 40 years of age.

"By leaving a healthful, active, happy life and keeping up all our interests, we can grow and develop and adjust ourselves and feel that we are growing until we are one day suddenly dead, without ever realizing in any distressing or painful way that we are growing old at all.

"Already old age has gone quite out of fashion. The civilized, educated man or woman of 70 is younger than the savage of 40 or the peasant of 50. What with steady spread of regular vacations and country or suburban homes and walking clubs and golf and gardens and automobiling and travel of all sorts, those who would have been considered old once are now only 70 or 75 years young.

"Not only is there no definite period in adult or later life when these so-called senile changes begin, but there is no period at which they become accelerated or start to progress at a more rapid rate than before. In fact, the extraordinary paradox exists, that what we term old age is the time of life in which we are growing old least rapidly. The only thing that makes it appear otherwise is that we have been steadily growing old all our lives long and the thousand imperceptible accumulations have mounted to a pitch which we can recognize."

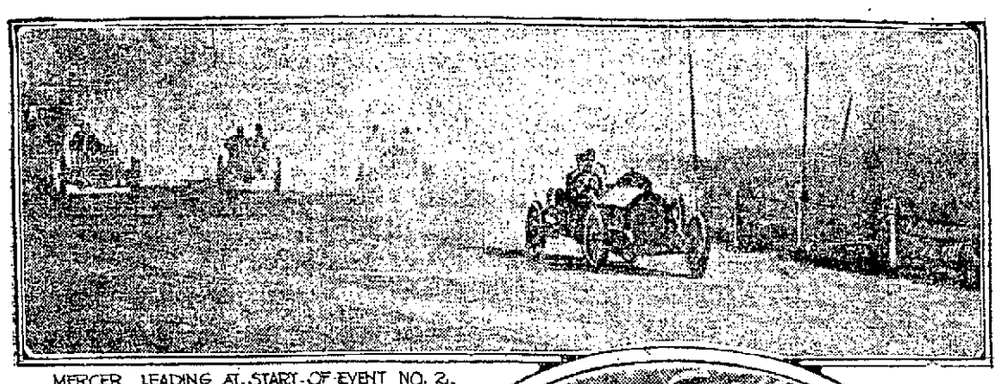
THOUSANDS SEE AUTOMOBILE DRIVER DASHED TO DEATH ON BRIGHTON TRACK



MERCER LEADING AT START OF EVENT NO. 2.

With four thousand spectators watching him in a trial spin on the Brighton Beach race track, on Long Island, H. Frey, an automobile driver, was killed when his mechine was forced by another against an iron fence.

Frey was circling the track in a Mercer racing machine when the crash occurred that resulted in his death. While running at sixty miles an hour he was forced into the fence directly in front of the old paddock and the car turned over twice. When Frey was pulled out of the wreckage and taken to the hospital it was found that both legs were broken and that he had sustained internal injuries.

Despite the accident the racing was spirited, nearly every contest, at one time or another, developing situations that brought the crowd of four thousand spectators to their feet. The feature race, programmed at one hour, was changed to sixty miles. It was won in dashing style by Ralph De Palma with the "90" Simplex, in a close finish with Hughes' Mercer and Anderson's Marion.
